Dining Car Segregation Banned by High Court

Texas, Oklahoma Universities Must Abolish Unequal Setup for Negroes

Rulings Unanimous

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Supreme Court yesterday struck three blows at unequal treatment of Negroes in the United States, but it did not rule on the constitutionality of racial segregation.

In three unanimous rulings on the final day of the 1949-50 term, the court:

1. Struck down segregation on railroad dining cars.

2. Ordered the University of Texas to admit a Negro to its white law school because its Negro law school does not yet offer "substantial equality in the educational opportunities offered white and Negro students by the State."

3. Ordered the University of Oklahoma to remove restrictions on a Negro graduate student forced to sit, study and eat apart from white students.

Chief Justice Vinson delivered the latter two 9-to-0 rulings. Justice Burton delivered the 8-to-0 dining-car ruling, Justice Clark not taking part in that case.

The unanimity of the court, especially in the two school cases, was an obvious feather in the Chief Justice's cap. For few cases since early New Deal days had created so great an interest as the segregation issue, and the court has split on virtually every other major issue this term.

The railroad dining-car segregation was thrown out on the simple grounds that it violated the Interstate Commerce Act making it unlawful for a railroad to subject a passenger "to any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever . . ."

The educational cases were more difficult. The Federal Govern-

Talmadge Defiant Of High Court's Ruling

Atlanta, June 5 (U.P.).—Gov. Herman Talmadge defied the United States Supreme Court today by asserting "as long as I am your Governor, Negroes will not be admitted to white schools."

Talmadge issued a bitter statement on the high court's ruling against segregation at the Universities of Texas and Oklahoma and in railway dining cars.

"The line is drawn," said the 37-year-old son of the late Eugene Talmadge, who has carried on his father's fight to uphold the Southern traditions of segregation.

Talmadge will run for a new four-year term in the Georgia primary June 28 against former Acting Gov. M. E. Thompson.

Judge Cockrill's Attitude Hostile, Says Court Aide

MISS VIRGINIA CLARY
. . . Was asked to resign

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Judge Edith Cockrill yesterday was accused of vitiating "basic principles of sound Juvenile Court practice." She countered by charging her accuser, the court's social work director, Virginia Clary, with "inefficiency."

These were highlights of a day which began with release by Miss Clary and Miss Clare Fagrie, chief court supervisor, of the correspondence which led to their resignations, and ended with an hour-long press conference called by Judge Cockrill.

Miss Clary, in a letter May 31 explaining her resignation, wrote Judge Cockrill:

"Your attitude creates a hostile atmosphere in the court room for children and adults alike. This attitude makes it impossible for you to recognize and understand the problem of the individual who appears before you and vitiates his ability for rehabilitation.

"This is illustrated by the instances in which you take the drastic step of commitment to a correctional institution in cases of children who could be more

Pal Caught After Chase Of 5 Blocks

Two Eighth Precent policemen, on the alert for purse snatchers near the Shoreham Hotel, last night shot a 20-year-old mechanic fleeing with a purse containing $200 in cash and $300 in jewelry.

In serious condition at Emergency Hospital, with a bullet wound in his upper left leg, was Alfred Funderburk, whose address was listed as 718 Somerset pl. nw.

Held for investigation at the precinct station was the 22-year-old driver of the car in which Funderburk was fleeing. Police identified him as Raymond J. Bell, an installation mechanic, who listed his address as 6907 6th sw.

Complete Change of Clothes

In the auto police said they found a nickel-colored toy revolver, a hacksaw, a radio, a battery and a complete change of clothes for both occupants.

At 10:20 p. m., Pvts. Robert S. Shutleworth and Eugene B. Gooding, riding in an Eighth Precinct scout car, reported they were alerted by a lookout for two white men in an old model car wanted for purse snatchings.

A few minutes later, they said, they spotted a car answering the lookout in the 2800 block of McGill ter. nw., parked at the curb with lights out.

The police car was facing east, a short distance from the other which was turned west. Suddenly, police said, Funderburk raced to the auto with a pocketbook in his hand, jumped in and the car shot away.

Sideswipes Scout Car

As the auto sped off, it sideswiped the police scout car and continued on. Shutleworth, at the wheel, spun the scoutcar around and gave chase.

Forced to make a U-turn, the police car lost considerable ground at the outset but after a five-block chase, a shot halted the Bell's auto at 30th st. and Woodland rd. nw.

It was at this point, police said, that Funderburk dashed out of the auto and started to run. Both Shuleworth and Gooding fired and he dropped with one wound in the left leg. The officers were uncertain which hit him.

Visitor Tells Story

The laden black pocketbook which Funderburk held, police said, belonged to Mrs. Natalie Bgates of 28 E. 73rd st., New York City, who is staying at the Shoreham.

Mrs. Bgates told police she was approached in the 2800 block of McGill ter. by a man who held a nickel-colored gun, grabbed her purse and made off.

During the chase, police said, another purse was tossed from the fleeing auto. Sixth Precinct police reported it belonged to Cassie L. Wood of 1442 Somerset st. nw., and had $5 in it. This one was recovered also.

Well after midnight, Emergency Hospital officials said Funderburk was being rushed to surgery. An acute loss of blood was endangering his life, doctors said.

At the precinct station, police said Bell refused to admit anything.

New Group Is to Study Loyalty Files

President Truman has decided to name a group of distinguished citizens to study the charges of Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) that there are Communists in the State Department.

An official statement on the make-up of the group, and an explanation of its task, probably will be issued by the White House today.

Mr. Truman, according to those who ought to know, has no intention of appointing a "super-board" to look into McCarthy's charges. The distinguished citizens he asks to serve probably will be added temporarily to the Loyalty Review Board headed by Seth Richardson, a Republican lawyer, who was Assistant Attorney General in the Hoover Administration.

They would be asked to make a study of the files of 81 persons against whom McCarthy has made charges.

Among those who have been under consideration are Admiral Chester Nimitz, USN (ret.); Judge John Patrick Higgins, Chief Justice of the Massachusetts Superior Court, and Judge John J. Parker of North Carolina, presiding judge of the Fourth Circuit United States Court of Appeals.

Others also have been under consideration, and reporters were warned not to go out on a limb with respect to those three.

Senator McCarthy made his charges about Communist spies operating in the State Department back in February. The Senate promptly ordered its Foreign Relations Committee to make an investigation of the charges, and a subcommittee of that committee headed by Senator Tydings (D., Md.) was given the assignment.

Only a Draft, Connally Says

Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) of the Foreign Relations Committee pointed out that the bill before the joint group was "only a draft" and probably would be changed.

"We're not going to turn a lot of wild militarists loose," he added.

Pressed for a further explanation of the Administration's specific aims under the section, Johnson said he would answer in executive session. Some observers have felt that State and Defense chiefs have Yugoslavia in mind.

The proviso—Section 10 of the draft—would empower the President to divert up to 10 percent of the $1,222,500,000 arms aid proposal for the North Atlantic Pact countries, Greece, Turkey, Iran, Korea, the Philippines and Asiatic countries in the "general area of China."

It would permit the aid to go to "any other nation whose increased ability to defend itself against aggression is found by the President to be vital to the security of the United States."

Johnson also told the committee that he did not go along with the view expressed by Secretary of State Dean Acheson last week that the arms aid program might have to be increased in future years.

He declared that there was no disagreement between him and Acheson on the point, but only a difference in estimates of what it will take to do the job.

"I'm not in favor of appropriat-

New Weapons Ready For Europe's Defense Without Huge Armies

Acheson, Johnson In Confident Talks To 'Hill' Committees; Allies Reassured

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

New and improved weapons can make western Europe defensible without the need of huge conscript armies, Secretaries Acheson and Johnson indicated yesterday in confident statement to Congressional committees.

The weapons are understood to cover a much wider range than the "atomic artillery" that Gen. J. Lawton Collins, the Army Chief of Staff, described as "possible" in a talk on Sunday.

They include, first of all, brand-new nonatomic weapons that American scientists have found to be feasible in checking a possible Soviet invasion of western Europe. One thoroughly informed source said yesterday that the United States was "very close" to developments of tremendous importance in this field.

They include, secondly, weapons and gadgets that were used on a relatively small scale, but with deadly effect, in stopping the German attack in the Battle of the Bulge in 1944. After the war, they were taken out of production, and the information about them was buried in official files.

Now their production is about to be resumed as fast as possible, in many instances in improved models, for use by America's North Atlantic treaty partners.

Acheson told the Foreign Ministers at London last month that the new and almost-new weapons would be available, and this knowledge dispelled the haunting fear of the French and other continental Europeans that they would have to conscript and maintain great land armies.

Yesterday, in telling the House Foreign Affairs Committee about the London decisions, Acheson said it had been agreed to base the North Atlantic forces "on the most modern military techniques and the utilization of the most modern weapons capable of mass production."

"The intent," he said, "is to utilize to the utmost the real strength of the West, the strength which lies in its inventiveness, initiative and technology rather than to create huge standing forces.

"In this way the North Atlantic treaty countries can build the military posture requisite to the situation and yet be able to maintain the ecenomic strength which is equally essential."

He added an assurance that the United States would not try to arm its treaty partners with obsolete or wornout equipment. The aim of the new military aid program, he said, was to provide re-

Vandenberg Protest Brings Change in Scope of Arms Aid; Johnson Agrees

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Senator Arthur W. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), yesterday challenged a provision of the Administration's new military aid bill empowering President Truman to arm any nation threatened by Russia.

Speaking out for the first time on Capitol Hill since his recent illness, the veteran GOP leader protested it amounted to a "blank check" under which the President "could take the whole world into our defensive cooperation."

His objection won a prompt agreement from Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson that the language might be too broad but had no such aim.

"This is a provision to meet an emergency," Johnson told a joint meeting of the Senate Foreign Relations and Armed Services Committees. He added that he was perfectly willing to see it changed to so state.

Vandenberg indicated he might agree to some provision permitting the President to act in an emergency to grant military aid to a country threatened with Communist aggression not now eligible, but wanted it strictly limited.

Truman Hails Point 4 Plan, Signs Aid Bill

The Point Four program, bringing American technical "show-how" to backward areas abroad, became a part of the law of the land yesterday.

President Truman signed it as a part of the huge foreign aid bill, and predicted that it could make a "tremendous contribution" toward a more prosperous and peaceful world.

Its enactment into law came 16 months and 16 days after the President first proposed it in his inaugural address last year. Congressional leaders of both parties were with him as he signed.

The bill also authorizes funds for the third year of the Marshall Plan, for economic aid in the Far East, and for relief to Arab refugees from Palestine.

Although appropriations still have to be fought for, enactment of the authorizing bill will enable the United Nations to hold a world-wide conference on technical aid.

Hickenlooper And Loveland Ahead in Iowa

BULLETIN

Des Moines, Iowa, June 5 (U.P.). Earl F. Wisdom conceded defeat by Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper in Iowa's Republican senatorial primary tonight. Wisdom was running second behind Hickenlooper in the three-way race.

Des Moines, June 5 (AP).—United States Senator B. B. Hickenlooper jumped into an early lead for Republican nomination over two opponents in today's primary election.

Albert J. Loveland, former United States Undersecretary of Agriculture and strong advocate of the Administration Brannan farm plan, was the front runner in the six-man contest for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

The first 278 of 2474 precincts to report gave Hickenlooper 15,123 votes to 2226 for Harry B. Thompson, Muscatine salesman and truck farmer, and 3507 for Earl F. Wisdom, Des Moines attorney.

At the same point, Loveland had 3536 votes to 2637 for former Governor Nelson G. Kraschel, vigorous opponent of the Brannan plan; 960 for Otha D. Wearin, former Congressman; 906 for Alvin P. Meyer, Van Meter, farmer and oilman; 256 for Ernest J. Seemann, Waterloo businessman, and 324 for M. W. Shaw, Newton theater operator.

Wearin has advocated determination of a farm program at the State Democratic convention following the primary election.

If no candidate receives 35 percent of the vote, the nominee will be selected in the post-primary State convention.

Governor William S. Beardsley is the first Republican gubernatorial candidate in a dozen years without opposition in the primary.

U. S. Wins Suit For Texas, La. Oil Tidelands

The Federal Government has paramount rights to the oil-rich Texas and Louisiana tidelands just as it does in California, the Supreme Court ruled yesterday.

The Louisiana case was decided, 6-to-0, in the Government's favor. But the court split, 4-to-2, in the Texas case. Justice Douglas wrote both majority opinions.

The decisions evoked an eruption of comment in Congress and in the two Southern States, most of it unfavorable. The House twice has voted to turn over the rich areas to the States and the Senate once agreed. President Truman vetoed the bill, however, and the legislative deadlock continues.

Texas and Louisiana have been granting oil leases to private companies for drilling in areas estimated to contain from 5 to 10 billion barrels of oil. Yesterday's decision outlaws state administration of Gulf oil drilling, but how the Federal Government will assert its newly asserted right is a puzzle. Congress has refused to pass a law to let it do so in California.

Douglas gave the Government and the states until September 15 to submit forms of decrees to carry out the court's ruling. Texas' Attorney General Price Daniel at once said he would ask a rehearing at the 1951 term next fall, while Louisiana's Attorney General Bolivar Kemp said "Our hope has always been in Congress."

But Chairman O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) of the Senate Interior Committee said the ruling "removes all obstacles" to consideration of legislation for Federal operation of the areas and he indicated his committee may act soon. The

Fresh Doubt As to Tax Cut Is Expressed

Top Democrats on both sides of the Capitol yesterday aired doubts about the survival of the 1950 tax bill as the House Ways and Means Committee continued to slice away at excise levies.

A cut in the tax on auto accessories and tires and tubes and a complete exemption for electric toasters was added yesterday to the $1,070,000,000 in excise reductions already tentatively or finally voted.

The new reductions would cost the Treasury an estimated 66 million dollars more, but the committee recouped about five million dollars by increasing the rate on slot machines and other gambling devices from $100 a machine to $150.

The dim view of the bill's future stemmed not only from the protracted committee sessions, but also from increasing indications that the unit won't dig up enough new revenue to counterbalance the cuts.

Mr. Truman has threatened to veto any bill that falls short of a balance if in fact the legislation ever reaches the White House.

OHE Employes to Take Week's Payless Leave to Meet Deficit

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Each of the 2900 employes of the Office of Housing Expediter will go on a week's leave without pay before June 30.

In addition, layoff notices to all employes that were supposed to become effective at the end of business today have been recalled and they will be reissued with June 30 effective dates.

Administrator Tighe Woods first planned to fire about 1700 employes as of today and to retain a 1200-man staff. His employes proposed instead that each employe, including Woods himself, help make up the budget deficit of $200,000 by taking a week off without pay.

The layoff notices to some or all of the employes will be recalled again if Congress votes to extend rent control after June 30.

In other developments, the House yesterday voted a bonanza to the 100,000 Federal workers who retired prior to April 1, 1948.

Thornberry Bill Approved

It approved the bill of Representative Thornberry (D., Tex.) to give these elderly people (1) free survivorship benefits, and (2) a 25-percent boost in their annuities or $300, whichever is smaller.

The Langer-Chavez Act, which went into effect on April 1, 1948, gave retired employes their choice of the two benefits. About 25,000 took the survivorship option to provide for their wives, and the remaining 75,000 took the annuity increase. They would get both benefits at no cost under the Thornberry bill, which now goes to the

Mrs. Pittman's Trusted Aide Held on Charge of Forgery

A suave, mustachioed, 61-year-old self-styled colonel last night was charged with forging the name of Mrs. Key Pittman, widow of the Senator, to a check for $985.42 and to an airline charge account while acting as her business manager.

Police were questioning him on information they had that Mrs. Pittman's losses might total $75,000.

The man, "Colonel" Stanley Waldorf Moulding, sr., of 4906 South 30th st., Fairlington, Va., has a bad check, larceny and vagrancy record extending from the Kingdom of Sweden to the city of Los Angeles, police said.

Moulding, ruddy complexioned and just under 6 feet tall, surrendered at police headquarters shortly after 1 p. m. yesterday.

He was accompanied by Attorney Sidney Sachs and another lawyer.

Police quoted him as saying he received the title of colonel when he was "a member of an organization in Mexico."

Mrs. Pittman told reporters she met Moulding a short time before her husband's death in 1940 when he was employed as a clerk in the Senator's office.

Following Pittman's death, she said, Moulding left. She said she received a letter from him in 1947 asking to meet her again. She said that in 1948 she hired him to take care of her household and of her "health."

"He is a charming gentleman," Mrs. Pittman said. "I trusted him implicitly. She declared Mouding "always said grace" before meals at her home. "He went to church every Sunday," she added.

Mrs. Pittman told police Moulding lived rent free in a small house on her property at 2620 Foxhall rd. nw.

His duties, she said, were to pay out current bills. She said it was her custom to furnish him a signed blank check and for him to fill in the proper amount.

But, Mrs. Pittman said, he was not empowered to sign contracts and was not given the power of attorney.

Last March, Mrs. Pittman said, she was warned by friends to check on Moulding's activities. She told police that when she asked him for her bank statement he became evasive. A few days later he disappeared.

Sergt. David Higgins of the check and fraud squad swore out a warrant for Moulding's arrest

Plane With 65 Aboard Down In Atlantic Off Florida

Miami, Fla., June 5 (AP).—A non-scheduled airplane with 65 persons aboard went down in the Atlantic Ocean 330 miles northeast of Miami tonight and blinked out an "S O S" with a flashlight.

The C-46 plane, en route from San Juan, Puerto Rico, to Wilmington, N. C., with migratory workers, was trying to make Nassau, Bahamas, when it went down.

A sister ship, circling the area, reported at 11:30 p. m. (EST) that it sighted a flare and a flashlight blinking out the distress signal.

The plane went into the water at 10:06 p. m. (EST) after Pilot Joseph Halsey of Seattle, Wash., radioed he was losing altitude rapidly, was then flying at 200 feet and "it looks like I'm going in the drink."

The Coast Guard swung into action on a wide front, sending planes and surface craft to the scene. A PBM left the Coast Guard base at Elizabeth City, N. C., along with a PBI-G (converted B-17). Two PBYs from the Miami Coast Guard base and one PBM from St. Petersburg also flew to the area.

The 165-foot Coast Guard cutter Aurora left Savannah, Ga., and the 125-foot cutter Agassiz was standing by at Moorehead City, N. C.

The sister plane planned to remain over the area until a third plane owned by the company could fly there from Wilmington. Then it was to fly to Miami to refuel.

The plane was owned by Westair Transport, with headquarters at Seattle and offices in Miami and Millville, N. J.

The craft had seven 10-man life rafts, 65 Mae West life jackets and 1 Gibson Girl life jacket.

It left San Juan, Puerto Rico, en route to Wilmington and thence to Millville, carrying migratory workers to New Jersey. The sister

MacArthur Tells Japan to Ban Top Reds From Office

Tokyo (Tuesday), June 6 (U.P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur ordered the Japanese government today to ban from public life the 24-man Central Committee of the Communist Party, including seven members of Parliament.

MacArthur's move may be followed by the introduction in Parliament of a bill to outlaw the entire Communist Party.

In a letter to Premier Shigeru Yoshida ordering the ban on the Central Committee, executive body of the party, MacArthur said the 24 men he named had flouted law, order and authority in hope of preparing the way for the overthrow of constitutional government by force.

The ban means that the committeemen who are members of Parliament must give up their seats.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Katsuo Okazaki announced the government would carry out MacArthur's order immediately, and he indicated it would do so enthusiastically.

Ironically, MacArthur acted under the Potsdam agreement — signed by Russia—which called on Japan to eliminate anti-democratic elements.

MacArthur acted two days after a parliamentary election in which Yoshida's pro-American, anti-Communist Liberal Party made substantial gains.

3 Lobby Groups Face Contempt Citations

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A threat of contempt citations against three organizations unless they produce financial records for the House lobbying investigation was made yesterday by Chairman Frank Buchanan (D. Pa.) of the House special committee.

The witnesses and organizations named by Buchanan were Edward A. Rumely, Committee for Constitutional Government; Merwin K. Hart, National Economic Council, and Joseph P. Kamp, Constitutional Educational League.

To Probe Backers

Buchanan said he was determined to find out the "big money" interests backing the organizations.

"We know that the Committee for Constitutional Government has been deliberately withholding the names of its financial backers in the reports it files under the lobbying act," Buchanan said. "Rumely's outfit has adopted a phoney 'sale' dodge to make it appear as if it doesn't receive any contribution over $500." Under the present lobby registration act only those who give $500 or more a year need be named as contributors.

"Rumely," said Buchanan, "has defied Congress before, and so has Joe Kamp of the Constitutional Educational League. Hart of the National Economic Council has given us some of the financial data we need, but not enough. If he doesn't give it to us tomorrow, I will recommend contempt proceedings."

In a speech on the floor, Representative Wright Patman (D., Tex.) termed Rumely's committee a "Fascist" organization and the "most dangerous in our country."

Rumely's Background

He said Rumely got "more than $1,000,000 from the German government before World War I and used it to buy a New York newspaper that "propagandized" the German side of the conflict. Rumely was convicted and sentenced as a German agent, but later pardoned, he said.

In another speech on the floor Representative Andrew J. Biemiller (D., Wis.) assailed the committee for Constitutional Government as "the Nation's No. 1 hate lobby."

Biemiller, who described himself in a press handout as "a staunch Fair Dealer," charged that the National Economic Council ad the Constitutioned Educational League were members of the "interlocking directorate" of the same "over-all conspiracy."

In Industries

Truman Holds Accidents U. S. Menace

President Truman yesterday urged the Nation to cut sharply its industrial accident rate so its full resources can be used to meet the "threat of totalitarianism."

The President used the platform of his Conference on Industrial Safety as a vehicle for a fresh plea for world freedom.

In an address prepared for the group's opening session at the Labor Department Auditorium, Mr. Truman said some people would have the United States draw back in its shell while the "totalitarian tide rolls over the world."

"Others, at the opposite extreme," he said, "cry hysterically for us to turn ourselves into an armed camp overnight—without regard to what happens to the rest of our national life. Neither of these courses will meet the problem.

"What is called for is a program that will create the greatest possible national strength—civilian and military combined—over a period of years.

"This Nation's voice in the world can never be any stronger than our national economy and the will of the people to defend their way of life.

"That is why it is so important that we press forward with programs to increase our productive capacity and improve our standard of living. That is why it is more important than ever for us to prevent the losses that result from industrial accidents. We cannot afford wasted resources or wasted lives."

The President said that in 1949 the number killed in industrial accidents was 15,000, equal to the population of the City of Plymouth, Mass.; 79,000 were permanently disabled, about the population of Durham, N. C., and 1,870,000 were injured, as many as the population of Oregon.

"This is a situation we cannot tolerate," he said, adding that such an accident rate is "inexcusable" and "appalling."

He said the conference set a goal last year to cut the job accident rate in half by the end of 1952, but that injuries in 1949 were reduced by only 7 percent, which is "not good enough."

H-Bomb Ruin Of Continent Is Pictured

New York, June 5 (AP).—How a series of hydrogen bombs in a line might destroy over hundreds to thousands of miles was described today in The American Scholar.

The article was written by a well-known atomic scientist, Prof. Harrison Brown of the University of Chicago.

A hydrogen bomb line would be a series of bombs in a line that might be hundreds of miles long but which would contain very few of these bombs.

"If the hydrogen bomb works," he said, "technically speaking, it is easy to visualize a series of hydrogen bomb explosions carried out along a north-south line at about the longitude of Prague. The radioactivity produced by the explosions would be carried eastward by the winds, destroying all life within a strip 1500 miles wide, extending from Leningrad to Odessa, and 3000 miles deep, extending from Prague to the Ural Mountains.

"By the time the radioactivity passed the Urals (approximately three days), the intensity would be lower and the destruction would be less.

"Many human beings could survive such an attack by protecting themselves with shielding, and wearing gas masks to filter radioactive dust. But radioactivity is not specific against human beings. Animals and vegetation within the area would be destroyed. Such an attack would produce a scorched earth of an extent unprecedented in history.

"The United States could be attacked in similar manner. Hydrogen bomb explosions could be set off on a north-south line in the Pacific approximately 1000 miles west of California. The radioactive dust would reach California in about a day, and New York in four or five days, killing most life as it traversed the continent."

Visits to Comfort Veterans Urged by Archbishop O'Boyle

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, last night said he was shocked to learn that patients in veterans' hospitals haven't had visitors in years.

In a speech at the annual meeting of the Sodality Union of the archdiocese held at Carroll Hall Archbishop O'Boyle urged area Catholics to visit veterans in hospitals.

It is an act of Christian charity he said, to bring comfort to these men.

The Archbishop also urged th 8000 delegates, representing 4 area parishes, to set an example for American Catholics in contributing clothing to the Pope's Storehouse in Vatican City.

Describing the activities of the storehouse which he visited on his recent Holy Year pilgrimage, the Archbishop warned stocks are constantly being depleted by the heavy demands of Europe's needy.

Urging all who could to make the pilgrimage, Archbishop O'Boyle declared that without exception those who went with him left Rome with a deeper love for Almight God, increased faith and a sincere respect for the Holy Father."

On behalf of the union, Mrs. Joseph Egan of St. Gabriel's Church, retiring president, presented the Archbishop with a check for $4000 to aid rural schools in the archdiocese.

The Rev. Charles W. Nelson, spiritual director of the union, installed Miss Lucille Mary Herrick, of the Church of the Annunciation parish, as president.

Others installed were Miss Dorothea Kibby, of St. Stephen's, vice president; Miss Mary McBride, of St. Anthony's, secretary, and Mrs. Melvin Waters, of St. Mary's, treasurer.

Truman Names VA Hospital Study Board

President Truman yesterday appointed a three-man committee to review the whole controversial veterans' hospitalization program. The committee, a statement by the President said, will pay special attention to the problems of "paraplegics and amputees."

The President named Dr. Howard A. Rusk, chairman of the department of physical medicine and rehabilitation at New York University College of Medicine and Bellevue Hospital; Dr. Arthur Abramson, head of the department of physical medicine and rehabilitation at the Veterans' Administration Hospital, the Bronx, an outstanding physician and himself a paaplegic; and Rear Admiral Rober L. Dennison, his own naval aide, to serve on the committee.

The President's action came as the aftermath of protests from veterans and members of Congress over abandonment of some veterans' hospitals.

Particular protest was made against transferring paraplegics—patients paralyzed from the waist down—out of the Birmingham General Hospital at Van Nuys, Calif. Moving of the Birmingham paraplegics to the former Long Beach (Calif.) Naval Hospital was completed last week. The Navy had dropped the Long Beach institution and turned it over to the Veterans' Administration.

The committee will call in consultants and specialists and report its findings directly to the President. The presidential statement said: "To provide clarification of existing hospitalization problems and needs of disabled veterans, I have today appointed a special committee to review certain of these problems, especially those of the paraplegics and amputees. . . .

"The committee has been authorized to call in consultants and specialists as it may find necessary. It will report its findings to me."

A committee representing veterans of the Birmingham General Hospital recently complained that the President declined to see them to hear their case. Mr. Truman recently told a news conference he would not see the group. A number of veterans' hospitals were dropped recently.

The controversy ties in to some extent with recommendations of the commission under former President Hoover that nearly all Government hospital operations be lumped into one administration.

The American Legion has led a stern fight against putting veterans' hospitals into such a grouping.

Farm and Factory Jobs Show Increase of 1,063,000 in May

A 1,063,000 upsurge in farm and factory job openings in May put unemployment to 3,016,000—the lowest since April, 1949.

The Census Bureau, reporting this yesterday, said the number of persons with jobs rose in May to 59,731,000, highest since August, 1949.

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer, in releasing the figures, commented:

"These figures substantiate other highly encouraging reports of an upswing in business activity this spring. Although the absorption of new workers in the economy is still a problem, it is significant that we are again close to the record job total of the year 1948."

Since February, employment has shot up by 2,778,000 while unemployment has been reduced 1,627,000. The drop in unemployment was not as great as the gain in employment because the number of job seekers increased in that period.

The Census Bureau cautioned, however, that "most of the gains since the beginning of the year were due to the seasonal expansion in agriculture, construction, and outdoor work in general."

Many Government officials are still concerned about the possibility of another upturn in unemployment when the schools let out this month, sending vast numbers of students into the ranks of job seekers.

Farming accounted for 876,000 of the 1,063,000 increase in job openings during May. Non-farming empoyment was up only 196,000.

Judge Ritter, Fought By Watkins, Approved

President Truman's nomination of Willis W. Ritter to be United States District judge in Utah has been approved by a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee, Chairman McCarran (D., Nev.) said yesterday.

The nomination is opposed by Senator Watkins (R., Utah). Ritter was recommended by Senator Thomas (D., Utah) for the judgeship.

Unions Fight Bill to Ban Rail Strikes

A bill to outlaw railroad strikes was described by the Nation's rail unions yesterday as "dangerous legislation conceived in stress and hysteria."

George M. Harrison, head of the AFL Railway and Steamship Clerks and spokesman for 21 rail unions, told a Senate Labor Subcommittee the measure sponsored by Senator Donnell (R. Mo.) would increase rather than cut down strife on the railroads.

Donnell would require that disputes be settled by compulsory arbitration if they were headed toward strikes.

Because of this, Harrison said, the measure would be a first step toward totalitarianism and would destroy a half-century of efforts to cultivate peaceful labor relations in the rail industry.

He said enactment of the Donnell bill "will not only spell the end of amicable employer-employe relations in the railroad industry, but will inevitably lead to the nationalization or Government control of the railroads."

Representatives of the railroad industry have supported the Donnell bill as an amendment to the Railway Labor Act.

In addition to Harrison, the committee heard testimony from Davis B. Robertson, head of the Railroad Firemen's Union, and Arthur J. Glover, president of the Switchmen's Union, both of which have struck or threatened to strike in recent weeks.

Denham Sees NLRB Repealing T-H Law Through Its Decisions

General Counsel Robert N. Denham of the National Labor Relations Board asserted yesterday that some of the board's decisions seem aimed at repealing the Taft-Hartley law through "decisional attrition."

He made the charge in a copyrighted interview with U. S. News & World Report, independent weekly news magazine. He said the board also seems to have destroyed any such thing as a stable labor contract.

Discussing his running fued with the board, which recently led President Truman to try to eliminate his job, Denham denied union charges that he is antilabor. He said he only is trying to enforce the letter of the law.

"My idea has been that in order to do that, it is necessary to interpret and apply that law with the same general degree of fairness and equality on one side as you do on the other," he said.

"I've criticized some of the board's decisions as being inclined to repeal the law by what I call decisional attrition."

The courts, he said, will have to decide who is right.

As an example of what he called "attrition," Denham cited a recent board decision that a labor union can announce any time after a contract is signed that it desires to end the agreement within 60 days.

He said he believes Congress intended the 60-day period to go into effect when the contract is about to expire so the union and company will have time to try and reach a new agreement.

"But apparently the board's interpretation is quite different," he added. "As I read the decision, its effect seems to be that there is no such thing as a stable contract any more. Your contract is made up, apparently, of agreements of 60 days each."

Denham admitted, however, that the board had indicated it might interpret the law differently if the contract had a no-strike clause.

Britain Preparing Pool Alternative

Congress Told

Acheson Feels No Dismay at British Stand

Secretary of State Acheson yesterday said he was "not at all dismayed or discouraged" by Britain's refusal at this time to join in the Schuman plan.

Six nations—France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxenbourg, Italy and West Germany—agreed last week to start negotiation on the proposals of Foreign Minister Schuman of France for a pooling of their coal and steel industries.

The British, however, declined to agree in principle to the proposals on the ground they did not yet know what the scheme would involve.

Questioned by Mansfield

Yesterday, at a hearing of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Acheson was asked to comment on the British stand. Representative Mike Mansfield (D., Mont.) asked whether the Secretary didn't think there was a need "for England really to recognize that she is a part of western Europe."

Acheson said he didn't think it appropriate for him to comment on what the British should do. The recent Anglo-French notes on the subject, he said, did not involve British opposition to the plan or coldness to it; they involved only "the time at which the British should start discussing it."

"The British have not in any way repudiated the premises or repudiated the plan," Acheson said.

Later, answering Representative A. A. Ribicoff (D., Conn.), the Secretary said the plan was "rooted in a most important and far-reaching proposition"—namely, that there would be no tariffs or quantitative restrictions on coal and steel in western Europe, no hidden restrictions and no discriminatory freight rates. The countries involved, he went on, would try to get common pay and working conditions for the workers in the steel and coal industries.

benefits to Europe if it can be worked out," Acheson said. "You would get a very much enlarged trading area and you may very greatly increase not only production in western Europe but productivity per worker.

"That would have a colossal effect. And it would also have a great political effect on the old rivalries between France and Germany.

He was asked whether this would not create a vast new cartel, boosting prices to the consumer and dividing markets among the participants.

On the contrary, he answered, there is an analogy between the Schuman proposal and the American Constitution as it emerged in 1787:

"It says, in effect, that there shall be one big trading area and a common authority over it, just as we set up a Federal authority over interstate commerce.

"It will be possible for this new authority to take any one of several courses, just as our Constitution depended on the wisdom of Congress after 1787.

"I am sure that the development of this plan won't take place exactly as we would like it, but I am also sure it will be a tremendous step forward. It seems to me that this proposal is so important and far-reaching that we ought to look at it as it is, and not criticize it for what it might become."

London, June 5 (AP).—Britain is drawing up her own proposals for accomplishing closer cooperation among European coal and steel industries, a Foreign Office spokesman said tonight.

Britain thus hopes to keep the door open to the new industrial structure projected by French economic planner Jean Monnet and sprung as a surprise on May 9 by French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman.

The original proposal called for union of the coal and steel industries of France and Germany, with membership open to other European countries.

The outlines of the British ideas are still secret and are being filled in by a top level committee, involving most government departments under the direction of Britain's chief economic planner, Sir Edwin Plowden.

Plowden and his committee are winding up an investigation of what the Schuman plan would mean to Britain. Details of the proposal were given to British government officials by Monnet a few days after Schuman disclosed his idea.

Italy, Holand, Belgium and Luxembourg, in addition to France and West Germany, now have committed themselves to the idea of unity under a powerful international board with authority to enforce its coal-steel orders on the member nations.

Although Britain refused to enter the French conference, to be held in Paris in about two weeks, she still is deeply interested in it.

Britain has strong fears of the effect such a powerful industrial combine might have on British industries, and on the economic planning that is the central pin in the Labor government's political philosophy.

A big fear is its possible impact on wages and employment here, since British steel and coal industries pay more than their continental competitors. The Schuman plan proposes an equalization of such conditions.

Another fear is that Britain might find many continental markets for coal and steel closed to her unless she joins.

Bill Introduced For New District War Memorial

Representative Wayne L. Hays (D., Ohio) yesterday introduced a bill for a $100,000 memorial in the District to those who served the United States in the Spanish-American War, the Philippine Insurrection and the Boxer Rebellion.

The kind of memorial would be decided by a nine-member commission—three Senators, three House members, and three officers of the United Spanish War Veterans. The bill was sent to the House Administration Committee. The measure authorizes the appropriation later of up to $100,000.

Committee Approves Doty

Guilty Pleas Entered by 13 In Czech Trial

Prague, Czechoslovakia, June 5 (U.P.). — Zdenek Peska, 50, a stoop-shouldered former professor, described the Communist regime today as the "dregs of society" as he and all 12 other defendants pleaded guilty in a mass treason trial.

Peska, the tenth Czech to testify, made the defiant statement as he pleaded "partially guilty" to the treason and espionage charges before a state court in Pankrac prison. Soon afterwards the last of the 13 defendants also pleaded guilty.

Foreign Aid Charged

All 13 were charged in the indictment with fostering the overthrow of the Communist regime with the help of Western news correspondents and diplomats, including former United States Ambassador Laurence Steinhardt.

Peska, former professor of Bratislava University who specialized in teaching the constitution of the Soviet Union, said he had once written a pamphlet on the Communists in which he said that "never before have the dregs of society risen to power."

Asked if he still believed that was correct, he replied, "Yes."

Prosecutor Capt. Juraj Vieska, a one-time student of Peska, told reporters during the afternoon recess that he planned to call about 30 more witnesses because "we are not satisfied with the confessions of the defendants."

Vojtech Dundra, 70, former secretary general of the Social Democratic party, followed Peska to the stand. He replied "Yes" when asked if he considered himself guilty as charged.

Dr. Bedrich Hosticka, 36, the 12th defendant, said he had been "in contact" with the alleged plot with Steinhardt and the former French and British ambassadors. He said he was aided by Capt. Jack Novak, former assistant U. S. Military Attache here.

Hosticka said he had shown an underground "action" plan to Catholic Archbishop Joseph Beran and that he approved it.

Contacts Alleged

Hosticka testified he formed "underground" groups of the Catholic Peoples Party which were to act as a fifth column in case of United States or British armed intervention.

Dr. Jiri Krizek, 55, former legal adviser to the British Embassy, was the thirteenth and last to plead guilty. He charged that British Vice Consul Adrian L. McLaughlin was the "chief of the British espionage service in Eastern Europe and the Mediterranean."

Krizek said that Mrs. Maurice Dejean, wife of the former French Ambassador, had hidden Mrs. Ivo Duchacek, whose husband is now a professor at Yale University, and helped her and her two children get out of the country.

West German Rally Planned By Red Youth

Berlin, June 5 (AP).—A gigantic Communist youth rally in west Germany was planned tonight by Red leaders eager to scuttle the Schuman plan.

Communist spokesmen charged the proposal of French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman for pooling western Europe's coal and steel resources, including those of the Ruhr, was "direct preparation for a third world war."

All Soviet-controlled propaganda agencies in Germany tonight attacked the Schuman plan as the greatest immediate danger to Moscow's "peace policy."

Grim-faced Erich Honecker, chairman of the Free German Youth (FDJ), led 500,000 Communist youths in the anti-West Whitsunday rally in East Berlin but failed to carry out boasts to "storm all Berlin." He told a news conference today the next FDJ demonstration will be held within the borders of the west German republic.

He refused to name the city or the date for the blueshirt organization's projected invasion, but his words recalled the proclamation when the Berlin parades broke up that "we will next meet in Bonn on the Rhine." Bonn is the capital of the west German republic.

Honecker emphasized the FDJ will launch a recruiting drive among west German youths beforehand.

Other speakers include Dr. Emanuel Shoenbach, associate professor of preventive medicine at Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, who will discuss the newer antiobiotics at 3:15 p. m. Thursday, and Dr. Richard C. Carey, instructor in medicine

Admiral Denfeld Lugs Rifle in Boston Parade

Boston, June 5 (AP).—There in the ranks, lugging a rifle, marched the admiral.

It was the annual parade of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts, founded to fight off Indians in 1638 and now 312 years old. Shouldering his rifle amid sounds of drums and music in old streets today was Admiral Louis Denfeld, retired, former Chief of Naval Operations. He joined the outfit as a private April 18.

Western Germany Gets Right To Restore Chemical Industry

Bonn, Germany, June 5 (U.P.).—The Allies gave the Western Germans sweeping authority today to restore their chemical industry to its prewar greatness, including the manufacture of explosives.

The new authority was given the Germans in an amendment to the American-British-French industry control law.

Under the amendment, the Germans may manufacture, under control by licenses, ammunition, chlorine, synthetic ammonia, nitro-cellulose, fuses and fireworks.

The Germans may also make or import radar equipment under special license by an Allied military security board.

Production of heavy water and synthetic rubber is still forbidden. Effective August 31, synthetic gasoline may be manufactured under two specified processes but only by permission of the security board. Radio and optical equipment for military use also were banned.

Manufacture of ammunition is permitted for "sports and civil security."

German officials hope that they now may be able to get an increased ammunition supply for hunters.

World Bank Sending Missions To Turkey and Guatemala

Two separate missions have been authorized by the World Bank for immediate economic surveys in Guatemala and the Near East political hot spot, Turkey.

In the case of Turkey, long coveted by Moscow, a 12-man team of specialists is expected to begin work on the scene by June 17. This team will be headed by James M. Barker of Chicago, board chairman of the Allstate Insurance Company and a director of many banking and industrial firms.

President Eugene R. Black of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development said yesterday that the work of this mission will extend to all major segments of Turkish economy, including money, banking, public finance, foreign trade, agriculture, industry, and public health.

The object of the survey, he said, will be to propose specific action for Turkey's economic progress. G. Stewart Mason, loan officer of the World Bank, will also be on hand as liaison with the Turkish government and the bank.

The Guatemala mission will be directed toward establishing that country's best economic potentialities. This study group, which is expected to begin work June 14, is led by Dr. George E. Britnell, head of the Economics and Political Science Department, University of Katchewan, Canada.

World Bank officials pointed out, however, that the Guatemala study will not be concerned with recommending specific development, nor will it consider possible financing by the Bank.

In another development, World Bank officials announced that Costa Rica has agreed "in principle" to the use of its 18 percent paid-in membership currency for Bank loans, provided such use is approved by the Central Bank of Costa Rica in each case.

Jaycees to Hear Brown

Constantine Brown, newspaper columnist, will be the principal speaker at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Junior Chamber of Commerce at 12:30 p. m. Thursday in the Burlington Hotel.

Socialists Trail, Doubt Leopold's Return

Brussels, June 5 (AP).—Social Christians increased their pro-Leopold victory today but Socialists said there was doubt the King would return permanently to his Belgian throne.

A correction of errors in the count in the districts of Charleroi and Tournai gave the Social Christian Party and the Communists one additional seat each in the House of Representatives as a result of Sunday's elections.

The revision raised the Social Christian representation to 108, four more than the combined opposition in the 212-member lower house.

A leader of the Socialists also admitted that the pro-Leopold party was sure to get control of the Senate, too. The Ministry of Interior claimed the Social Christians would get at least 90 of the 175 Senate seats.

The party that may choose Jean Duvieusart, 50-year-old Minister of Economics, as the next Premier thus seemed to have the power to bring back King Leopold, an exile in Switzerland for 10 years.

But Socialist leaders, who have threatened strike action to prevent the King's resuming his throne, expressed doubt that the royal question, which has kept Belgium split in four elections since the war, finally had been settled.

They said they were confident they had a new ally—the 48-year-old King himself.

One Socialist leader said he believed Leopold would refuse to return permanently to his throne. Some support for this view was given by Leopold partisans.

A soruce close to the King's secretariat said the King would expect now to be returned to the throne. But he added that only then would the monarch draw conclusions from the political situation.

Last April the King offered to turn over his powers temporarily to his son, 19-year-old Prince Baudouin. He refused, however, to sign a political contract binding himself in advance to abdicate permanently.

Social Christians also were showing some doubt as to what the King's attitude would be toward an attempt to form a one-party government on so slim an electoral basis. Belgium has been governed by a coalition of one or more parties for so long it is almost a tradition.

The Social Christians got only 47.74 percent of the popular vote for the lower house Sunday. In an advisory referendum last March on whether the people wanted the King back, Leopold received 57.68 percent of the vote.

Communists lost a greater proportion of their seats Sunday than any other party. The Liberals also were heavy losers.

A semi-official tabulation showed this house standing:

Social Christians, 108, a gain of 3.
Socialists, 77, a gain of 11.
Liberals, 20, a loss of 9.
Communists, 7, a loss of 5.

Social Christians won 54 of the 106 Senate seats at stake yesterday. Socialists 39, Liberals 10 and Communists 3.

Point 4 Plan Signed Into Law With Aid Bill

beginning at Lake Success next Monday.

One object of the conference will be to determine how much other countries will contribute toward U.N. technical assistance work abroad. The United States is ready to contribute up to about 10 million dollars if the other countries together put up the same.

The new law authorizes the spending of 35 million dollars on technical assistance, of which about 10 million will be for existing American programs, and a part of the remainder can be contributed to the United Nations for similar work.

In a formal statement the President called Point Four "a major new step forward." He said the exchange of technical knowledge and skills, and the fostering of capital investment abroad, were not new ideas; "they are in line with the American traditions of initiative and free enterprise."

"But we are now ready to put these activities on an organized, sustained basis and to direct them toward the building of a more prosperous and peaceful world.

"If we can, gradually but steadily, help to replace sickness with health, illiteracy with education, poverty with higher a standard of living, for the millions of people who live in underdeveloped areas, we shall make a tremendous contribution to the strength of freedom and the defeat of Communist imperialism."

The President said he looked forward to the continued efforts of private groups with experience in this field, and "to the interest of our young people, whose technical skills can find such important employment in this work."

He noted that the betterment of backward areas could lead to "expanded business investment," and expressed the hope that Congress would soon enact the companion bill encouraging private investment in these areas.

Dealing with the third year work of European recovery, for which the bill authorizes $2,977,000,000, the President said the people of Europe "are drawing closer together in common purpose and common defense."

"I am confident," he said, "that this third year of our assistance will give impetus to increasing cooperation of these countries, will add greatly to their collective strength, and will bring closer the day when they can contribute on a self-sustaining basis to the economic growth of all free nations."

He declared that American economic aid to Korea, Formosa and southeast Asia would give the people in those countries "tangible evidence of our continuing friendship and support." He also said he was "especially glad" Congress had authorized funds for Arab refugees in the nations neighboring Israel.

Summing up the entire act as "a memorable step forward," the President praised it as "a tribute to the wisdom and vigor of the forward-looking members of Congress of both political parties, of both Houses, and particularly to the hard work of the responsible congressional committees."

cipient countries "with the most modern equipment in production in this country."

On the othe rside of the Capitol, Defense Secretary Johnson told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that "no attempt will or need be made to match Soviet strength division by division, or by mere numbers of armed men."

"A relatively small European ground force, provided it is equipped with modern weapons, and supported by an adequate tactical air force could, in the judgment of our Joint Chiefs of Staff, contain the early phases of a Russian invasion.

"In the dread event of war, such forces could be given immediate effective support by United States strategic air forces. At the same time, this European resistance would be necessary to make fully effective the new weapons which our long-range bombers can utilize.

"Acting together, the North Atlantic Treaty nations can defend the area. But the prerequisite of this joint defensive strategy, of course, is the prompt equipment of the treaty nations with the modern weapons and increased fire power made possible by today's science."

Acheson made it clear to the House committee that it would be expensive for the United States to make and supply the complex and delicate "modern weapons" in effective quantities. Answering Chairman John Kee (D., W. Va.), the Secretary of State said he did not think the rearmament of western Europe would be half finished by the time the second year's military aid program ended in June, 1951.

"I wouldn't mean that the effort needed would be a vast one," he explained. He said the total cost would depend to some extent on whether the international situation stays the same or improves.

"The Soviet Union could do much to lighten the burden for everybody," he said.

But without giving the slightest sign that he expected a change for the better in Soviet policy now, the Secretary talked cheerfully and confidently of western Europe's prospects.

In his prepared statement he said he had returned from Europe "with increased confidence and assurance that the resources of the free world, not only the physical resources but those of the spirit and mind, are adequate to meet the threat that shadows our present existence."

In answer to Representative Charles A. Eaton (R., N. J.) the Secretary said he did not think of the present program as preparation for war, but rather "as the best method of preserving peace there is."

He again talked of the "real community" emerging among the North Atlantic nations, and predicted that out of it would come "very much needed strength in the United Nations and for the United Nations."

"Our best and indeed our only chance of preventing war is to have a strong defensive system in western Europe," he said.

The Secretary told Representative Jacob K. Javits (R., N. Y.) of "a new spirit of vigor and confidence" in western Europe.

"There's no enthusiasm among the Europeans—and I don't blame them—for being 'liberated,'" Acheson said. "But if they feel they can prevent themselves from being occupied, then this spirit of confidence will grow."

Acheson conceded, in answer to another question, that the phrase "cold war" had had a bad psychological effect in Europe.

"It's not a good phrase, and I think it might well be dropped," he said.

He recalled that the phrase had been invented to describe what the Soviet Union was doing, but said it had been twisted to describe what the United States was doing to check Soviet pressure.

Representative A. A. Ribicoff (D., Conn.) suggested that maybe the phrase "peace through strength" might be a substitute.

But Acheson smiled and shook his head.

"I don't belong primarily in the 'phrase department,'" he answered, and he had no other phrase to suggest.

ing a billion dollars a year for the rest of our lives and those of our children," said Connally.

Johnson agreed and said the military aid program did not contemplate any such plan. Quizzed later in the day by members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee on the same point, he said:

"If the cooperation of the pact countries continues as now—and there is every evidence that it will—it should be necessary to carry on the program for another three or four years and I hope with decreasing amounts."

The Defense chief said he had expressed this view a year ago and still holds to it. He added that Pentagon chiefs generally agreed.

Connally asked why action should not be taken to appoint a supreme commander for the North Atlantic treaty military forces, declaring "you can't have 10 or 12 generals running around without having someone to tell them what to do."

Johnson replied that he did not favor appointment of suh an overall commander now. That can be done later, if trouble comes, he added.

The Texan also wanted to know how we can be sure that other parties to the treaty will fulfill their roles. Secretary Johnson said he was sure they will and added:

"They are living under the gun much more than we are."

Connally snapped that "our Treasury also is under the gun."

In objecting to the "blank check" provision of the bill, Vandenberg said that as he read it, the President "without congressional consent or any protective provisions in the legislation" could "increase the scope and area of our entire responsibilities."

Johnson said he didn't "see it that way," that the intention behind it is only to "meet an emergency."

"I don't think we should create machinery under which the President could take the whole world into our defensive cooperation," commented Vandenberg.

In his prepared statement read to the Senate and House committee, Johnson declared that "only through increased and unified strength in western Europe can we hope to deal with Soviet Russia on relatively even terms."

He gave this report on progress to date and plans for the future:

By the end of this month, arms deliveries under the pact will total about 152 measurement tons, 195 planes and 13,500 tons of naval vessels.

About 1.1 billion of the $1,314,000,000 appropriated for the current fiscal year will have been obligated by then. The present bill would carry over the unobligated funds.

A "balanced collective force for the North Atlantic area" must be created rather than "separate self-sufficient national forces." This, however, does not mean that the United States forces will not be balanced. Because we have commitments all over the world not within the framework of the Atlantic Pact, we must keep such balance in our Army, Navy and Air Force at least until western Europe actually is rearmed.

General Outline of Plan

Here is the general outline of the plan, as spelled out by Johnson:

WESTERN EUROPE—A relatively small European ground force must be built and equipped with modern weapons, backed by an adequate tactical air force. America's strategic air force must be prepared to give immediate support. Our Joint Chiefs of Staff believe such a force could contain the early phases of a Russian invasion of Western Europe, said Johnson.

GREECE—Much of the war-battered military equipment must be replaced if new Communist guerilla warfare is to be blocked.

TURKEY — The program for training and modernizing the Turkish forces is past the half-way mark.

PHILIPPINES—"A particularly firm continuance of military aid" is required to meet the Communist "Huk" guerilla operations.

SOUTHEAST ASIA—Individual country programs are being developed to meet the "particular and more pressing needs of those governments which are most immediately threatened by Communist aggression and subversion." Funds have been earmarked for "arms, ammunition, aircraft and other jungle-fighting equipment" for countries "in the Indo-China area."

INDONESIA—"Certain essential constabulary equipment is also to be provided to Indonesia in order to maintain internal security and assure the stability of the new govenment.

IRAN AND KOREA—Both countries remain subject to "varying degrees of external Communist aggression against which their present forces are inadequate."

Sharp New Quake Felt As Volcano Keeps Going

Honolulu, June 5 (AP).—An earthquake shook erupting Mauna Loa today as it sent a fourth river of lava pouring into the sea. The angry volcano's latest flow routed 30 more families from their homes.

The new earth shock from under Mauna Loa's flaming cauldron knocked out all the seismographs on the island of Hawaii.

The 13,680-foot volcano was in its fifth day of eruption with no sign its anger was cooling.

POINTERS for car buyers
The Simple Truth About "EASY TERMS"
It is often more convenient to buy a car out of income, rather than pay cash.
But to do so, involves additional cost. So it is important to keep this cost as low as possible. For instance, twenty-four months of financing service costs twice as much as twelve.
The cheapest and best way to buy on time payments is to pay all you can down and pay as much per month as you can comfortably afford.
Don't be misled by so-called "Easy" payments. Take time to check on all costs as well as services proposed, when you buy.

Barkley Vote Wins Approval For Trade Bill

Vice President Alben W. Barkley's tie-breaking vote yesterday won Senate approval of a foreign trade bill over Republican claims that it lets Russia pay off its spies with American money.

Barkley's vote broke a 30-30 snarl that was brought on by a fight over a provision authorizing the President to restrict fur imports, most of which come from Russia.

The clause in the Senate version, ostensibly aimed at preventing "serious injury" to the domestic fur industry, had been stricken by a House-Senate conference committee.

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), who has repeatedly charged that Communists infest the Government, led the fight for its restoration. He claimed the Russians are using the money they get from furs sold here to finance espionage. He said the provision was aimed "almost exclusively" at Russian skins sold in this country by Amtorg, the official Russian trading company.

Senator Eugene O. Millikin (R., Colo.) backed him up. He said the domestic fur industry is "flat on its back" because "stupid" Administration policies tax it to carry on the cold war while Russian furs "overwhelm" its markets.

Chairman Walter George (D., Ga.) of the Senate Finance Committee pooh-poohed these arguments. He said the clause would not give the President "an ounce of power" he does not already possess.

The bill now goes to the President. It will allow foreign goods to be fabricated, assembled and displayed in "foreign trade zones" — restricted areas near United States ports where products can be stored temporarily without payment of import duties.

St. Peter Altar Consecrated In Excavation Under Vatican

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

IN VATICAN GROTTOES—Dedicating an altar to St. Peter deep in the grottoes of the Vatican yesterday, Pope Pius (center foreground) reads from book held by Carlo Toraldo DiFrancia (facing camera). Assisting is Msgr. Enrico Dante (right), prefect of papal ceremonies. Ceremony climaxed years of excavation of the grotto, which the Pope has identified as the burial place of St. Peter. Man at lower left is unidentified

Vatican City, June 5 (AP).—Pope Pius descended deep in the Vatican grottos today to consecrate an altar over what he believes to be the final resting place of the first Pope—Saint Peter.

The solemn, private ceremony took place after long years of excavations.

After the consecration, the Pope celebrated the first mass at the shrine. Then he descended with architects and archaeologists to the lower level where Saint Peter is believed to have been buried. There, th Pope knelt in prayer.

The burial place of the Apostle, the Pope said on January 30, 1949, "is and was under the cupola of Saint Peter's Church."

Since then, there have been reports of more specific findings during the excavations, but there has been no Vatican confirmation of them.

The grottos are divided into three naves, supported by massive columns.

The central altar is dominated by a statue of Christ holding a scepter. Deep in the grottos is a marble statue of Saint Peter, similar to the bronze statue in the Basilica whose toe has been worn smooth by the kisses of millions during the centuries.

Hundreds of Holy Year pilgrims prayed on the marble floors at the head of the ancient crypts today, unaware of the private consecration below. The Pontiff and a small group of prelates and Vatican officials entered the grottoes from a new doorway.

An inspection by the diplomatic corps and journalists is expected to be made soon. Then the grottoes will be opened to the public.

British Ship Shelled; Six Chinese Killed

Hongkong (Tuesday), June 6. (AP).—A British blockade runner was shelled Sunday by Chinese Nationalist warships. Six Chinese passengers were killed, her owners said today. Six passengers were wounded.

Manager Wang Ying-chung of the Ta Hing Shipping Co. declared the attack on the 800-ton coastal steamer Cheung Hing came when it had just left the southeast China port of Amoy after unloading a cargo of fertilizer for the Communists. He said it was not delivering war material and was engaged in legitimate trade.

Outbound it carried more than 100 Chinese passengers, a crew of 62 and four British officers.

Wang asserted that 22 miles at sea, well out of territorial waters, two Nationalist warships pumped more than 200 shells into the little coaster. (Probably most of the hits were machinegun bullets. Most Nationalist warships are small, lightly armed gunboats.)

Capt. J. Skinner of the Cheung Hing wired that the vessel developed a bad leak, which caused a slight list.

The first merchant ship to break the blockade of Communist Shanghai since the Nationalists gave up their Cushan base arrived in Hongkong today. The 3000-ton British Mausang docked in the harbor with a full cargo from Shanghai.

Western Union Indicted by New Jersey Jury

Bridgeton, N. J., June 5 (AP).—The Western Union Telegraph Co. was indicted today on gambling charges for transmitting money-order horse-race bets in New Jersey.

Deputy State Attorney General Nelson F. Stamler said $300,000 a year was bet through the Western Union office in this South Jersey community of 16,000 persons.

Large Sums Handled

Western Union collected an average of $26,000 a year on message charges, he added, and about $120,000 came back in return money orders to successful bettors.

Stamler said Western Union facilities had been used in an attempt to get around New Jersey gambling laws.

Named with Western Union in five indictments returned by a Cumberland County grand jury were Charles H. Frake, manager of Western Union's Bridgeton office, and J. W. Donaldson, alias Leo Link, of Teaneck, N. J., listed as a recipient of betting messages.

Western Union was charged with aiding and abetting in bookmaking by transmitting horse race bets between 1948 and 1950.

Seventy percent of all bets made through the Bridgeton office in the last three years went to Donaldson, Stamler said.

He said Donaldson, about 60, had been linked with bookmaking operations in Massachusetts and Maryland. A bench warrant was issued for Donaldson's arrest.

The company and Frake were accused of maintaining a disorderly house here at the Western Union office. Stamler said persons were allowed to come to make bets there.

Frake and Donaldson were charged with conspiring to establish a bookmaking place.

One indictment was impounded by County Judge David L. Horuvitz at the request of Stamler, who said it involved the company and certain individuals outside the county court's jurisdiction.

The indictments said Western Union sent messages in the aid of illegal business from February 1, 1950 to March 6 by transmitting horse bets from James Notaro, operator of a nearby poolroom, to Donaldson.

Notaro's poolroom was raided by State agents in April and he was released in $1000 bail on a charge of operating a lottery.

Agents of the Attorney General's office raided the Bridgeton office of Western Union on April 26. At that time, Stamler said wholesale quantities of money orders had been transmitted to out-of State bookmakers to cover horse race bets which could not be placed locally.

If the bet was successful, the winnings were telegraphed back in another money order, Stamler explained.

The company said then that there was no State law prohibiting its New Jersey offices from accepting such money order bets but that it would refrain from taking any further bets until the question had been decided in the courts.

Gambling Jury Hears Newark Accountant

New York, June 5 (U.P.).—An accountant from Newark, N. J., ordered to produce all records dealing with a Florida casino operated by Frank Erickson, Joe Adonis and other gamblers, testified before a grand jury today.

I. George Goldstein appeared before the grand jury investigating gambling, bringing a bulging briefcase.

But he told reporters he was not an accountant for Erickson and refused to say whether he had ever worked for the Colonial Inn, the Florida establishment being investigated.

Tampa Gambling Boss Slain By Shotgun Blast From Car

Tampa, Fla., June 5 (U.P.).—A shotgun blast killed a top figure of Tampa's gambling underworld today, eliminating the principal witness in an alleged conspiracy to kill the local sheriff and State's attorney.

Jimmy Lumia, 46, gambler and small oil company manager, was killed by a shotgun charge from an automobile that tore off the top of his head as he talked with two employes at a street corner in Ybor City, Tampa's Latin quarter.

Gangland and police sources said Lumia died in a juggling of the local underworld command.

Lumia had been subpenaed as a defense witness at a June 19 hearing of conspiracy charges against five persons accused of plotting to kill Sheriff Hugh Culbreath, State's Attorney J. Rex Farrior, Lumia and gambler Salvatore (Red) Italiano.

The five included Joe Rodrigez, a former city commissioner; Roy and Arthur Velasco, brothers of gambler Jimmy Velasco who died in a sidewalk assassination December 12, 1948, and John (the Greek) Moutos, accused by Culbreath as the "trigger man."

Sources familiar with Tampa's underworld politics said Lumia was killed to make room for a new leadership of the rich Cuban "numbers" or "Bolita" industry. Italiano presented no problem to the unsurpers. He went to Italy recently, "for my health."

After the Velasco killing, Governor Warren warned Culbreath and Farrior that another such incident would result in their ousters.

You know Skylark is fresh-because it's DATED FRESH EVERY DAY!
LOOK FOR THIS DATE... it's your proof that Skylark is first-day fresh
Skylark ENRICHED WHITE BREAD

HERE'S WHY WE DATE SKYLARK:

It's your proof, your guarantee that your loaf of Skylark was freshly baked for today. Most other brands do not carry this proof. Always buy Skylark, in the red and white, candy-striped wrapper. You always know that Skylark is first-day fresh!

Each day's sale of Skylark is carefully estimated in advance. Then, Skylark's expert bakers mix all the fine ingredients, then pop the baking pans into the oven.

Finally, as each toasty-brown loaf comes out, it is wax wrapped and sealed with a special end seal.

This end seal carries the day, Monday, or Tuesday, and so on. Then the loaves are rushed to your Safeway Stores, just in time for sale. If there should be any unsold dated bread at the end of the day, it is removed—never again sold as fresh bread. No guesswork with Skylark—you know it's first-day fresh!

Business Bureaus Find Fewer Complaints, More Data Queries

Better Business Bureaus the country over are receiving an increasing number of requests for information and a smaller percentage of complaints, an official of the Association of Better Business Bureaus reported yesterday.

John N. Garyer, chairman of the board of the association, which is holding its thirty-sixth annual meeting at the Shoreham this week, said that last year a million inquiries were handled by the 91 bureaus. Of these, 23 percent were complaints and 77 percent asked advice.

This ratio, he added, is a direct reverse of the situation 36 years ago, when the bureaus first started operation.

Discussions yesterday concentrated on the need for eliminating "the small percentage of misleading and objectionable advertising."

George C. Reeves, vice president of the J. Walter Thompson Co., advertising agency, complained that some movie advertisers "believe that the entertainment value of a picture is symbolized by the size of the bust." He quoted movie ads reading:

"One passionate New Orleans Night that exploded into murder."

"Raging Island . . . Raging Passions. Bergman under the inspired direction of Rossellini."

"What she did to her sister no woman could ever forgive."

Reeves, chairman of the American Association of Advertising Agencies Special Committee on Improvement of Advertising Content, decried sexy ads for historical novels or the use of scantily attired females in prompting sale of unrelated articles.

The five-day meeting continues today at 9 a. m. at the Shoreham. President Truman will address the annual banquet tonight at 8.

Workers' Pay Ruled Ahead Of Tax Claims

Money owed "mechanics" whose labors and materials go into the construction of buildings takes precedence over tax funds owed to the Government, a Montgomery County Circuit Court judge ruled yesterday.

The strongly worded opinion came from Judge Charles W. Woodward in a case involving a dispute between the Federal Government and building supply companies and individuals over the priority of liens lodged against a defunct construction company.

The mechanics liens called for payment of $2675.03, while the Government demanded that it first be paid $14,000 in back withholding taxes.

In his opinion, Judge Woodward said:

"It would seem to be unfair, unjust and against all principles of equity and good conscience for the United States to ruthlessly take the surplus in this case for taxes when, had it not been for the work and materials furnished by the mechanics, there would have been no surplus.

"About 500 years before the birth of Christ, the prophet Malachi . . . put the rhetorical question, 'Will a man rob God?' and then proceeded to answer in the affirmative.

"About 500 years before the birth question is put to this court in a country whose Government was conceived, born and founded on Christian principles, 'Will the United States rob its citizens?'

"The answer of the United States attorney is 'Yes,' but the answer of this court is that it will not be a party to such immoral enrichment of the United States . . ."

The jurist then decreed that the mechanics' liens be satisfied first, the United States second, and Maryland State liens, if any, last.

The court action stemmed from the demise of the Tekton Construction Co., Inc., at one time situated at 7136 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda.

About two years ago the company obtained a loan from the Connecticut General Life Insurance Co., and secured it with a $15,000 deed of trust on two homes under construction.

Meantime, a demand was made by the Government on Tekton for payment of $14,000 in withholding taxes.

The insurance company foreclosed the deed of trust and the Montgomery County Court auditor sold the houses at auction to satisfy the deed.

In his report, the auditor allowed the mechanics lien of $2675.03 to be paid from a surplus of $4939.99 remaining after the deed was satisfied.

out on the bill were thrown out at the Capitol yesterday.

"In view of the lateness of the House in getting a bill to the Senate, I think there is considerable question whether a tax bill can be enacted," Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) told reporters.

A highly placed House member even suggested that the bill may not get through the House.

After yesterday's day-long committee "review" of the measure, House Ways and Means Chairman Robert L. Doughton (R., N. C.) commented:

"All I can say is that we are still trying to get a bill. I don't know whether we will be able to do it or not."

Still more than 600 million dollars shy of enough revenue to offset the excise tax cutting, the committee has repeatedly postponed a showdown on Mr. Truman's main proposal for bringing the bill into balance—a proposed four percentage point increase in corporate tax rates.

Since last Friday the group has been taking "clincher" votes on excise tax slashes that had previously only received tentative approval. When the committee quit yesterday some 739 million dollars in cuts had been finally approved and nearly 400 million more awaited "review."

The committee yesterday voted to cut the tax on inner tubes from 9 cents to 6¾ cents a pound and the levy on tires from 5 cents to 3¾ cents a pound. A reduction in the rate on parts and accessories, from 5 percent to 3¾ percent, was approved.

Previously the group had voted a complete tax exemption for used auto parts and likewise removed the excise on tires for lawn mowers, baby-buggies and children's toys.

Ratifying earlier action completely exempting cooking stoves, household water heaters and many other electric gas and oil appliances, the committee added a new item, electric toasters, to the exempt list. The toaster exemption alone would cost the Treasury four million dollars.

The day's lone revenue pick-up resulted from a $50 step-up in the $100 Federal excise on gambling devices. Penny-operated "amusement devices" were completely exempted from the current $10 tax, however.

Other actions by the House group, generally confirming previous tentative votes:

Subjected officers clubs and Government agencies to the regular occupational tax for on-premises sale of liquor and operation of bowling alleys at a profit.

Exempted from tax bowling alleys, billiard and pool tables operated without charge by nonprofit organizations or by the Government.

Cut the tax on musical instruments from 10 percent to 5 percent.

Halved the 2-cents-per-1000 tax on matches.

Cut the tax on household refrigerators from 10 percent to 7 percent, and brought deep freezers under the tax for the first time.

Exempted sporting equipment used predominantly in schools.

Cut the tax on photographic apparatus from 25 percent on cameras and 15 percent on films to 10 percent on both.

OHE Orders Payless Leave

Senate. The bill had been on the House calendar for a full year.

Also on Capitol Hill, the Murra bill to revamp the efficiency ratin system was passed over by the House. Representative Cunningham (R., Iowa) and others said the measure appeared to be rather complicated. The House okayed another Murray bill one to have Civil Service speedup lump-sum death benefits to the families of employes. The House Post Office and Civil Service Committee now plans to have hearings Thursday on the many bills to cancel the postal economy program.

Civil Service Report

The 5-month-late annual report of the Civil Service Commission was finally sent to Congress yesterday. Among the recommendations in it was a layoff plan that would "recognize the retention rights of these groups of employes":

(1) Those with substantial service-connected injuries, civilians or military, and who are fully qualified for their jobs; (2) those with veterans' preference, without jeopardizing others with much greater retention claims on the basis of many years of service, and (3) those with exceptional qualifications who should be retained in order to promote the efficiency of the service.

The commission gave a left-handed indorsement to the Hoover plan to have local wage boards fix the salaries of postal, clerical, and subprofessional employes, based on living costs and prevailing wages.

But first, the commission suggested a simpler plan be tried out—one to allow wages of these employes to be fixed within maximums and minimums to be set by Congress. Such a plan, it said, would give the Government enough flexibility to meet changing conditions promptly.

A total of 212 Federal employes have been fired on loyalty charges by Civil Service's Loyalty Review Board. The board's regular monthly report also revealed that 148 won their appeals, and about 655 cases are pending either before agency or the review board.

Veterans are now holding more than half of the Federal jobs in 18 different States . . . Civil Service will announce an examination soon for cotton technologists to pay from $3825 to $6400 to start . . . Tests are open at the Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., for director of training, $7600; mathematician, $3825 to $10,000, and physicist, $4600 to $10,000.

After June 30, the recall of former Federal workers whose names are on a reinstatement reserve list will be subject to specific priority rights. Veteran preference, length of service, and efficiency ratings will be used to compute priority rights. Federal agencies will be required to use the list in filling jobs.

8 GOP Senators Seek Cut in High Farm Price Supports

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Eight Republican Senators yesterday urged that the present high levels of farm price supports be lowered immediately.

The move, according to Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) who took the lead in opposing it, threatens indefinitely to delay adjournment. It came as an amendment ot a bill granting the Commodity Credit Corporation an additional two billion dollars for the price support program. Lucas warned that it would reopen the entire, highly controversial farm legislative program.

A full afternoon of debate ended with Lucas pleading with the eight to drop their plan. "Ordinarily," he told them, "I might go along. But if we pass this amendment, we'll just be getting ourselves into a lot of trouble. We won't get out of here for months.

The amendment that caused the row was offered by Senators John J. Williams (Del.); Irving M. Ives (N. Y.); Leverett Saltonstall (Mass.); Robert C. Hendrickson (N. J.); Styles Bridges (N. H.); Charles W. Tobey (N. H.); Ralph E. Flanders (Vt.); and Harry P. Cain. (Wash.).

Meantime another assault upon the Anderson Act from two potent Democrats who want higher price supports was announced. Chairman Elmer Thomas of the Senate Agriculture Committee said he and Chairman Harold D. Cooley of the House committee will join soon "in an effort to develop legislation giving farmers full parity prices for their products."

As if giving strength to Thomas' statement, the House yesterday passed a bill that Thomas had earlier offered, but which the Senate had turned down. That would permit wheat or other farmers whose crops were destroyed by bugs, bad weather or other natural causes to plant cotton in their place. It would increase acreage allotted for cotton production to accomplish this. The bill's chief aim is to help Oklahoma farmers whose wheat crops were destroyed by greenbugs and hail.

The Republican amendment would put the sliding scale of price supports in the Anderson bill into effect at once instead of in January, 1952, as now provided. At present, the Anderson Act orders price supports for the six "basic crops"—cotton, corn, wheat, peanuts, tobacco and rice—maintained at 90 percent of parity. Next year they will be mandatory at 80 percent of parity. In 1952 they become mandatory at 75 to 90 percent of parity, based upon the stocks of each commodity on hand.

Saltonstall and Ives spoke for the amendment. Saltonstall opened fight between farmers who grow the supported basic crops and those who grow nonsupported commodities.

"In Massachusetts," he said, "our farmers produce for the most part poultry and dairy products. They are nonbasic commodities. Our farmers are largely dependent upon the feed they must have through shipments from the Western and Central States. These grains are basic commodities, and are supported at 90 percent of parity. If the price of feed is kept at an artificially high support level and the price of eggs, poultry and milk drops, our farmers will get caught in the squeeze."

"The consumers in my State," he later said, "cannot understand why the taxpayer's money is used to buy farm commodities which are then stored out of reach of the consumer, in many cases until they are unfit for human consumption, or are later declared surplus. They believe it to be foolishness."

Arlington Segregation

The decision of the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals that Arlington County's Negro high school does not give its students educational opportunities equal to those afforded white students makes clearer than ever the already transparent impracticability of dual school systems. The point was reinforced by the Supreme Court's decision in the McLaurin and Sweatt cases yesterday. Arlington County's school board made a conscientious effort, as the Board of Education has done in the District of Columbia, to provide equal facilities for the two races. It failed not because it desired to discriminate but because discrimination is inescapable where segregation is the rule.

The Court of Appeals noted numerous particulars in which the Hoffman-Boston High School for colored students was inferior to the Washington-Lee High School for white students. Washington-Lee, to present only a single illustration, has a physics laboratory, a chemistry laboratory and two biology laboratories with furniture and equipment which cost $34,501; Hoffman-Boston has only one science room in which all of the sciences given in the school are taught, and the equipment cost $1934. The reason for the disparity is easy to understand. Washington-Lee has 1881 senior high school students; Hoffman-Boston has only 48, the Negro population of Arlington being small. It is manifestly not feasible to provide for 48 pupils the kind of laboratories and equipment that can economically be provided for 1881 pupils.

Segregation, apart from its ethical and social evils, is wasteful and costly. But, says the Court of Appeals, "the burdens inherent in segregation must be met by the State which maintains the practice." In Arlington County's case, the burden is an insupportable one. It cannot be maintained. There is no way in which the Arlington School Board can give equal educational opportunities to young Negroes and young whites save by giving them the same opportunities—that is, by integration, instead of segregation.

Not A Fair Trial

Senator Lucas predicts that Congress will return to its old practice of passing separate appropriations bills after its one-year experiment with an omnibus appropriations bill. "I never thought it would work," he said, "but I was willing to give it a trial. I know of no Senator with whom I have talked who feels that we have made any advancement toward saving either money or time by the one-package bill." In our opinion this is a premature judgment. For only after the bill has been enacted will it be possible to determine whether it has resulted in the saving of money. Moreover, the omnibus appropriations bill has never been considered a legislative time-saver.

On the contrary, one of the chief objections to it has been the fear that it would cause undue delay in the enactment of supply measures. To overcome this hazard appropriations committees might hold hearings concurrently, perhaps jointly, and both House and Senate committees ought to speed up action by having adequate staffs to assist them. In short, the slow-moving machinery of Congress is largely responsible for the fact that the omnibus bill is now hung up in the Senate Appropriations Committee.

It remains to be seen what the Senate will do, but the House Appropriations Committee certainly succeeded in reducing overall appropriations quite substantially. As The Washington Post has previously pointed out, the great advantage of a one-package appropriations bill is that it puts pressure on the appropriations committees to reduce expenditures and produce a more balanced spending program. And it gives members of Congress an opportunity to obtain a comprehensive view of the spending side of the budget picture that tends to curb enthusiasm for new spending projects.

As a matter of fact, the chief cause of dissatisfaction with the House-passed omnibus appropriations bill is due to the havoc wrought by two miscalled economy amendments from the floor—the Taber amendment reducing civilian salaries 10 percent below the President's budget estimates, and making other sweeping cuts in outlays for travel, supplies, etc., and the Jensen amendment prohibiting the filling of 90 percent of Federal civilian vacancies occurring during the next fiscal year. This is the kind of irresponsible budget cutting that justifies fears that omnibus appropriations bills might encourage the reprehensible practice of attaching riders to them that would wreck the spending program and force the President to veto them, leaving Government agencies without funds.

Substantial cuts in appropriations, as we have often observed, can be safely effected only by appropriations committees, and then only after careful study of their effects. If the House or the Senate recklessly votes sweeping reductions in recommended outlays by approving amendments from the floor, the omnibus appropriations bill will not be given a fair trial. At present, Senate appropriations subcommittees are awaiting instructions from the full committee, which has to decide what to do with the Taber and Jensen amendments. If they are rejected—as we trust they will be—more time will be lost trying to reconcile differences between the House and Senate bills when they reach the conference stage.

But, to repeat, the delay and confusion resulting from the manhandling of the omnibus appropriations bill by the House does not discredit its value as a legislative tool. It merely emphasizes the fact that procedural reforms cannot succeed if Congress persists in following unsound legislative practices.

The Defensive On Top

New developments in American weapons which have been hinted at for several months give an immense boost to the defensive in any war. The probability that the United States soon will have flexible atomic weapons plus other technical improvements capable of halting an aggressor substantiates the theory advanced by Dr. Vannevar Bush in Modern Arms and Free Men that the defensive is again in the ascendancy—that new weapons may make it so costly for an aggressor to launch a war that he will be deterred. Such is a phenomenon repeated many times in history from the bow and arrow to poison gas. All this has great importance, as Andre Visson pointed out on this page recently, in reassuring the people of western Europe that it will be possible to protect them from engulfment by the Red army.

Confirmation that the United States is working on a broad range of new atomic and nonatomic weapons came yesterday from Secretary Acheson. Earlier the Army Chief of Staff, Gen. J. Lawton Collins, spoke on a television interview about new military applications of atomic energy. Presumably he would not have mentioned them unless work was well advanced. What their advent would mean is that atomic weapons could be used tactically against enemy offensives as well as strategically against enemy industry. Jet planes carrying small atomic bombs, for example, would be of great usefulness in denying territory to an enemy. So would accurate guided missiles, atomic artillery shells and nonatomic developments in the proximity fuze and radar. Altogether these weapons give great promise that the United States is on the threshold of a revolution in conventional means of warfare. As General Collins noted, "these are essentially defensive weapons. We are certainly not going to initiate a war; and . . . the things that we are doing are of greater value to the person on the defense than . . . (they) would be for the man who is on the offense."

General Collins was careful not to say, of course, that these weapons are now on hand. According to our best information, they are well beyond the wishful thinking or drawing board stage, but are still two or three years away. What makes them feasible, in all probability, is that the weight of materials necessary to produce an atomic explosion has been reduced. The announcement that they are on the way is of considerable psychological value, but it does not mean that they could be counted upon in any immediate emergency.

Nevertheless the defensive aspect of the new weapons should help counter the "war is inevitable" line which so discourages the Europeans. The Western defense against Russia has never lain in attempting to match the mass of the Red army. On the contrary, tactical atomic weapons and similar devices should even decrease the need for manpower as they increase the ability of relatively small, skilled forces to hold against attack. As Secretary Acheson said yesterday respecting the military assistance program, "the intent is to utilize to the utmost the real strength of the West, the strength which lies in its inventiveness, initiative and technology, rather than to create huge standing forces." In other words, the accent is on quality rather than mere quantity.

Congressional Rule

Senator Knowland seems entirely to have missed the point of Secretary Acheson's appearance before the members of Congress, unduly assembled, last week. He has now suggested that Attorney General McGrath and FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover "follow the precedent" and submit to questioning by a joint congressional session on the Government's handling of the Amerasia case. The Secretary of State's appearance was certainly not meant to establish a precedent for indiscriminate heckling of any and all members of the executive branch on every controversial question that may arise within their jurisdiction.

The Attorney General might properly go before Congress to discuss a major problem or program of the Department of Justice. That would be in accordance with the spirit of Secretary Acheson's action. We have not, however, instituted parliamentary government to the extent of requiring Cabinet officers to explain every administrative act to the full legislature. Congress has committees quite capable of questioning the Attorney General on such details of the administrative record of his predecessors. Indeed, a committee of the Senate is now specifically engaged in an investigation of the Amerasia incident.

To suggest calling Mr. Hoover before the Congress as a whole is to distort the Acheson precedent out of all rationality. Fortunately the director of the FBI appears to understand this much better than the junior Senator from California. Mr. Hoover is the head of a bureau within the Department of Justice. He is not responsible for the determination of policy—in the Amerasia case or in any other matter of law enforcement. The notion of calling him to account before Congress as a whole is explicable only in terms of the precedent set by Secretary Sawyer who turned the Department of Commerce over to the control of Senator Malone. If this precedent were to be followed by other executive agencies, we should soon have complete congressional government.

Acheson's Backing

Secretary Acheson's emphatic praise for the Schuman Plan will give the French another fillip in persevering with their plan to unite the coal and steel complex to western Europe. Already the Dutch, Belgians, Germans, Luxemburgers, and Italians have accepted the principle of integration. Together with the French, they are now scheduled to meet in conference for the purpose of organizing an industrial union. Only the British will stay out, though, as Mr. Acheson said, this does not mean a British refusal to join. Cooperation depends upon the way the plan evolves, for the merit of the proposal, in British eyes, depends upon the detail, not the concept.

Perhaps, also, there is some resentment in Britain over the shock tactics that Mr. Schuman employed in launching his proposal. But the French Foreign Minister had his reasons. He knew that the best way of preventing birth would be secretly to hand over the idea to the experts working behind closed doors. Mr. Schuman has seen this happen many times without any result except to condemn Europe to one game after another of musical chairs. His idea, moreover, was to arrest the drift in European psychology in the self-defeating direction of "neutralism." Nobody knows better than he that the European man is not going to fight a fourth time for a peace based upon the preservation of the old fragmentation of Europe which precipitated conflict. Hence his effort to lift public discussion on unity with a practical proposal isolating the key questions of coal and steel which concern everybody and to which all contribute in the finished product. "Anything," as Mr. Churchill said in 1946, "is better than this ceaseless degeneration of the heart of Europe," and the Schuman of 1950 agrees with him.

In working out integration at this level British help would be invaluable, and may yet be forthcoming. That Mr. Schuman intends to go ahead with his European colleagues without the British, however, is testimony to his statesmanship. It is to our national interest to encourage this way of amalgamating the problems of France and Germany, and Mr. Acheson's words will come as aid and comfort to men who are trying to build a new Europe that is worth defending in the mind of the common man of Europe.

Indian Communism

Those who think of communism in Asia in black and white terms are given a poser from India. The chief Communist personality in India, P. C. Joshi, has started a new movement of "nonviolent" communism. He thus excludes himself from the noisy element of the Indian movement which is endlessly stirring up trouble wherever frictions exist in India. Actually communism has not a very big following, perhaps not more than 50,000, and, contrary to European experience, it does not spring out of poverty and misery. The poor in India are too fatalistic to be easily recruited. If their lot gets worse, they think they are merely reaping their just deserts, and accept the state of affairs with a unique submissiveness. The lack of communism is startlingly evident, for instance, among the millions of refugees who were driven from their homes during the slaughter of the innocents that came in the wake of the Indo-Pakistan partition.

Rather, communism in India is a cult for the intellectuals, generally those for whom there is no place in the professions. If there is a problem of communism in India, it is one that could become acute only if the Indian government sought to train, abroad and at home, professional workers beyond capacity of India to absorb. This mistake was made in China. In Ceylon the lesson has already been learned, and great care is taken not to force artificially the training of youths for occupations when the opportunity for practicing them is lacking. In India, where the abstract has an attraction which does not prevail in China, the Joshi deviationism may have some appeal, though not much, since all India knows that the Mahatma repudiated him when he sought to reconcile his communism with Gandhiism.

Petty Retaliation

Because reporters for Communist newspapers "slant and pervert" news, two members of the House think all of them ought to be excluded from the congressional press galleries. The State Department, which has recommended the admission of two more Communist reporters representing Pravda, evidently does not agree that the best way to prevent Soviet reporters from distorting reports on current political happenings is to deprive them of access to first-hand information. Exclusion from the press galleries of all Communist reporters, as a matter of policy, would give them an excuse for sending false reports on the ground of inadequate information.

Communist reporters who are permitted to enjoy all the privileges accorded American reporters will at least be impressed with the advantages of our system of unrestricted news gathering and uncensored transmission of news. To exclude them from the press galleries merely because their own countries impose restrictions on American reporters and censor their stories would be a petty form of retaliation unworthy of a country that is justly proud of the freedom accorded the press under constitutional guarantees.

Conscience Declaration

The writer wishes to express his thanks to Senator Margaret Chase Smith and her six Republican colleagues for their "Declaration of Conscience" which they introduced in the Senate. It is precisely what the Senate needed to jolt it back on the road to constructive criticism and investigation from which it was dangerously led astray by that horrendous technique of inquiry: McCarthyism.

By their forthright declaration and criticism, not only of the opposition but also of their own party, they have let the public know that there are some members of the Senate who will rise above party loyalty to defend American principles of justice when they are flagrantly circumvented. I am sure many of us will now breathe easier and feel less uneasy in heart and mind knowing that this is true.

H. J. BERTOLA.
Washington.

Does a good end ever justify evil means? Senator McCarthy believes that it does. By precept and example his solemn oath to preserve, protect and defend our Constitution is spiritual perjury. He has debauched every sacred guarantee of our Bill of Rights with his treasonous double standard. He has made our national honor and integrity the cheap pawns of power.

Senator Margaret Chase Smith has shamed all cynical politicians for the secret treason of double standards. She warns our Nation will perish at the hands of these hypocritical klansmen who lynch every ideal they have sworn to defend and preserve. God bless this noble lady who loves and serves the Golden Rule. And may God defend this Nation from the secret treason of those who hold it in contempt.

"Deviationism"

In its attempts to halt a rising tide of what might be termed "deviationism," the Soviet Union appears increasingly disposed to level an accusing finger at many Communists formerly in good standing.

That Stalinism differs in numerous important ways from the original concepts of communism must by now be fairly obvious. For one thing, the Soviet Union as presently constituted doesn't bear any really marked resemblance to the classless society envisaged by Marx. Without admitting it in so many words, the Soviet Union has come to recognize the importance of providing incentive, in the form of greater material rewards, for superior accomplishment. That may be good common sense but it can scarcely be regarded as a manifestation of pure Marxism.

Such practical common sense doesn't apply to all phases of Soviet endeavor, though. Certainly it hasn't been evident in relationships with neighboring countries. To expect, as the Kremlin quite evidently now does, that adherence to Communist dogma can expunge all nationalistic sentiments in the satellite lands isn't being very realistic. Love of country cannot be cast off like a worn garment. Even the great religions take cognizance of the fact that man's mortal loyalties necessarily must be shared. The Politburo, alone, demands complete and undivided allegiance. Therein lies one of its most glaring weaknesses—the inability fully to comprehend human nature.

Unquestionably, nationalism has brought its shares of sorrows upon our world. To the passions it has aroused and perpetuated can be attributed many of man's present ills. Should it now be the instrument by which further Soviet expansion can be held in check, however, it will have atoned in a degree for some of its past excesses. Were nationalism to assert itself vigorously in the lands now under the Kremlin's domination—as it has already done in Yugoslavia—the end results might conceivably provide a much-needed assist toward a more peaceable world. That might indeed be an ironic, albeit hopeful, denouement when one recalls how often the assertion of national prerogatives has in the past resulted in new evidences of man's inhumanity to man.

South African Progress

South African governments have often been castigated for their attitude toward racial discrimination. Both the present government of Dr. D. F. Malan and the previous one under Gen. J. C. Smuts, have been subjected to strong criticism in the United Nations and in the press. But these attempts to interpret government practice through theories developed in some far-away country could never apply to the factual problems of a country so unique as South Africa.

By definition, a democratic government worthy of its name can only act on the specific mandate it has received from the national electorate. No critic of the South African governments has ever suggested that their policy is contrary to the wishes of the national majority, as defined by the constitution.

The national attitude toward a given problem might—and often does—need revision when faced with new facts and new problems. No democratic government has the right to take corrective action without the country's indorsement; but it has the fundamental duty to bring to the general consideration those new facts and problems. Suggestions towards the solution of the new problems will come from all quarters, but the final decision must lie with the electorate.

Why then are there such attacks leveled at South Africa today? Maybe the answer to this attitude is to be found by reconsidering the meaning of May 31, Union Day. Only half a century ago, the Boer wars were tearing apart men and whole republics; soon after, however, the basis was found for the Union of South Africa's present four provinces. Other problems, perhaps equally serious, have faced the newly united country in these 40-odd years, but have always been met and finally settled in the real democratic manner. I am fully confident that its present problems will also be settled, after public discussion in a complete and sensible manner.

Perjury Trials

In your issue of May 25 under the heading "Ballot Theft Holiday Urged" a news story states that Truman's friends are barred from punishment in the Kansas City ballot frauds because of the statute of limitations which became effective on the 28th. In your May 22 editorial, "The Road Back to America," you state: "The statute of limitations on espionage should be extended to provide a tool better suited than perjury for getting at real fifth column activities." Yet the ballot criminal may be tried via the "perjury" route, unless he publicly brands himself a criminal either by pleading guilty or by exercising his constitutional right not to answer.

The course of the Attorney General in the Hiss case leaves no one protected from exposure if he ever commits a crime, although the statute has intervened. All the Attorney General has to do is take the culprit before the grand jury and ask him if he has committed the crime. This may be done no matter if the crime were committed 25 years ago because he will be tried for perjury this year. When a man pleads not guilty, and is guilty, he has perjured himself. It opens wide the door for a Hitler to eliminate enemies. FRANK LYON.

Arlington School Costs

It has been stated that the cost of the schoolrooms being built today in Arlington County is twice that of the rooms built during the period 1944-48. We are all aware of the fact that the better the quality of construction the higher the cost will be. The Fairlington Elementary School was built in 1943 and it is evident from the excessive amount of repairs necessary that the cost per schoolroom did not warrant good construction.

The Fairlington and other elementary schools in Arlington built before 1948 have no cafeterias and are completely lacking in rooms which would allow the bare essentials of comfort and privacy for the teachers.

The schools that have been built during the past two years and those now under construction have been planned with consideration for the teachers and children. They include cafeterias, teachers' rooms, libraries, and the like. They also minimize fire hazards by having separate exits to the street for every classroom. All additions to the old schools are being built to minimize hazards.

If, in addition to the fact that the new schools are truly schools in the broad sense of the word, they also have quality of material and workmanship that meets standards which will insure their continued usefulness to the community beyond 10 years, we, as parents in Arlington County, maintain that these schools are well worth the money being spent on them.

MRS. GEORGE C. McDOWELL,
Corresponding Secretary, Fairlington Parent-Teachers Association.

"Fire!"

I thought you might be interested to know that the Herblock cartoon of May 22—the one showing Hysteria climping up a ladder to douse Liberty's torch while he cries "Fire!"—sold three copies of The Washington Post in one family. One copy was for a child away at school, another one was for a younger child with his current events class here at home; the third one was sent to an American friend in Germany who sometimes wonders what is going on back here, and if all the people have lost their minds. The Herblock cartoon shows they haven't. H. S. P.

U. S. Peace Offensive

By Marquis Childs

Disarmament Debate

THE ISSUE of war or peace is about to be debated on a new level. The Senate will be urged to consider a resolution embodying positive proposals for peace and disarmament.

With the backing of both Republicans and Democrats, the resolution in effect incorporates the substance of the impressive speech made by Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) last February appealing for atomic peace. It proposes a special session of the General Assembly of the United Nations to take up disarmament of both conventional and atomic weapons.

The disarmament would be done on a realistic basis and verified by some agreed-upon method of inspection. If such an agreement could be reached, Congress would pledge itself to spend the money saved in disarmament on a plan for worldwide rehabilitation, including Soviet Russia and her satellites.

In his February speech McMahon pointed out that the United States was spending roughly 15 billion dollars annually on armaments and the development of future arms. He suggested that two thirds of this, or 10 billion dollars annually, be spent for five years on the Point Four program, on converting atomic energy to peacetime uses and on a general program of economic rehabilitation.

There can be no doubt that such a plan embodies the hopes of peoples in every part of the world. If its meaning could be projected through a greatly stepped-up information program, it would have powerful appeal.

IN SPITE of the protestations of President Truman and his Secretary of State, the impression is apparently spreading outside the United States that the policy of this country points toward war. The Senate resolution should go a long way to counteract this impression.

It might also counteract the growing belief within this country that an inevitable war is coming. At the very least it would be proof that America still has the underlying will to seek peace by any and all means.

But with respect to the reaction here at home the doubts and the uncertainties begin to arise. Secretary Acheson and the State Department oppose any such move at this time and it seems to me important to understand what is back of the official viewpoint.

In the view of responsible policy-makers, the Russians would at the outset refuse to send representatives to a special session of the U. N. General Assembly. They would refuse if only for the same reason that they have walked out of every other U.N. body in recent months—the presence of representatives of Nationalist instead of Communist China. Then if a special session without the Russians and the satellites should pass a disarmament resolution, it would become in Soviet propaganda merely another device of the Western warmongers to put the Communist half of the world on the spot. Such an attempt, as seen from the State Department, would also embarrass some of our friends, such as Prime Minister Nehru of India, who do not want to be forced openly into either camp.

BUT AN even more important reason for official distrust of any move to talk disarmament and peace around the conference table concerns public opinion here at home. Americans have a deep-seated belief that no controversy is so stubborn that it eventually cannot be talked out. This goes counter to the State Department view.

The present, in the view of the State Department, must be used by the West to catch up, or at least partly catch up, with Soviet rearmament of the past five years. Disarmament now, even on an equally matched and carefully inspected basis, can only mean greater weakness for the West in relation to communism.

There is great logic in this viewpoint. But it overlooks a whole host of factors, human and economic, that cannot be ignored. For one thing, Western rearmament, deficit-financed by the United States, risks an economic smash. If the official viewpoint is the correct one, then the American people must accept the realities and be prepared to make far great sacrifices.

It is, above all, here that those who are supporting the Senate resolution have served the cause of peace and put us greatly in their debt. Only through discussion and debate, recognizing the profound yearnings and hopes and fears of mankind, can the issue of peace or war be clarified. Secretary Acheson is about to launch a Nation-wide campaign of public education and persuasion. While he may not be inclined at the moment to agree, he has had a valuable assist from those who are insisting that America conduct a great frontal peace offensive.

Billiard "Shortstop"

In your glossary of gamblers' cant in the May 27 issue "shortstop" is defined as "A small bettor; a chiseler." This reminded me that many years ago—perhaps in 1924—I read in a billiard supply company's house organ that a "shortstop" was a billiard player just below championship caliber. Other readers may confirm this, although I never heard my friends, many of whom had misspent their youths, refer to a billiard player as a shortstop.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Strength Through Rational Hope

IN SENATOR Margaret Chase Smith's noble declaration of conscience there is the statement that "the Democratic Administration has completely confused the American people by its daily contradictory grave warnings and optimistic assurances." During the week when Mrs. Smith made her speech, Mr. Truman and Mr. Acheson severally and jointly did much to illustrate the truth of her criticism.

Lippmann

IN LOOKING for an explanation of this unsteady and confusing leadership, we may begin by realizing that the Administration is trying to do a very difficult thing. It wants to arouse the American people and our allies abroad to prolonged and nerve-wracking sacrifice and effort. Yet it does not want to discourage them and frighten them to a point where they crack up—with some screaming for war as a relief from the tension and others giving up all effort and all hope in order to seek a personal escape. Hence the prods and the pokes to arouse the poor beast are followed fairly regularly by a pat to keep him from rearing up and running away. On the whole Mr. Acheson operates the prodding and poking department and Mr. Truman the patting department.

The arrangement is a poor one. Mr. Truman and Mr. Acheson have the responsibility of leading the free nations through a trying and dangerous period. These contradictions, this unsteadiness, this blowing hot and cold, corrode the foundations of leadership. If people are to be led through trying days, they must believe that their leaders know what they are doing and that their leaders are telling them the truth.

SENATOR Alexander Smith of New Jersey asked Mr. Acheson the other day whether we could look forward to smaller appropriations for military aid in the future. Mr. Acheson replied quite honestly and most properly that the chances are that we must look forward to a larger military effort.

But having said what had to be said, Mr. Acheson, in my view at least, revealed his defect—which I believe to be remediable—as a leader of men in time of crisis. It is that in asking for popular sacrifice and effort he is failing to provide the people with a rational hope.

Mr. Truman's offhand optimism is not rational. Therefore it does not provide the hope which is absolutely indispensable in order to nerve nations to prolonged efforts and sacrifice. A rational hope, which is the indispensable ingredient, indeed the elixir of leadership, means the opening up of a credible and concrete vista of what can be accomplished if the people stand firm and make the effort.

A CLASSIC example of this is to be found in Churchill's immortal speech after the evacuation of Dunkirk. The famous peroration—"We shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds . . ."—rises to its climax, not in desperate heroics but in rational—indeed a cold-blooded and calculated—hope that "our empire beyond the seas, armed and guarded by the British fleet, would carry on the struggle, until, in God's good time, the New World, with all its power and might, steps forth to the rescue and liberation of the Old."

Mr. Churchill did uot just say to his hard pressed people, stand firm, fight to the death, and somehow—though I do not know how—you will be saved. He said if you fight on, America will turn the scale. The language of Churchill's speech was glorious. But what made him so great a leader in a desperate moment was his certain understanding of human nature—that men can endure almost anything if you will persuade their reason and will arm them with hope.

NOW THIS is precisely what is missing in Mr. Acheson's explanations and arguments. In his reply to Senator Smith of New Jersey he said that more and more armaments would be needed "unless there is a very considerable change in the international climate and actions of certain other powers."

That statement is a perfect illustration of leadership without the necessary element of rational hope. Mr. Churchill, whose situation was incomparably more desperate than Mr. Acheson's, offered the people a concrete reason for carrying on—that in the end America would intervene. But what does Mr. Acheson offer the people of the Western World as a goal for which to live and work? He offers them "a very considerable change in the international climate" which is to talk about as vaguely and as elusively as it is possible to talk. The masses of the people of Europe and America just cannot devote their efforts for years to come to the task of bringing about a very considerable change in the international climate. There never will be a time when all the free men of the world will be in agreement as to what changes are very considerable.

The fact of the matter is that the international climate is not an objective towards which nations and combinations of nations can work. They have to work for something more definite, something more tangible and visable.

NOW THERE is little doubt, in fact no doubt at all, as to what the rational hope of all European countries—whether they are members of the Atlantic treaty or not, whether they are Soviet satellites or not—must inevitably and always be. It is that the Red Army should retire from Europe, opening up to all Germany, to all of eastern Europe, the chance of national independence.

What are the inducements and what are the compulsions which could bring this about is the central problem of our time. But though we cannot now see clearly and in detail just how to achieve this object, we must proclaim it as the rational hope which inspires and which justifies our whole European policy.

Mr. Churchill did not know in June, 1940, just how, when America did intervene, the rescue and the liberation of Europe would be carried out. But that did not stop him, as lesser men are so continually stopped, from giving his people the rational hope that what did in fact happen eventually would happen necessarily.

SOMEHOW, some time, necessarily, the Russians will leave Europe. Europe can live only if it has the right to believe this. If we are well and are wisely led, we shall never cease to search for the means, never cease to search for the terms and conditions, never cease to devise the inducements and the guarantees in order to make it as easy as we can for the Russians to go away as soon as possible.

Segregation on Dining Cars Banned by Supreme Court

ment had joined the two Negroes involved (Heman Marion Sweatt in Texas and G. W. McLaurin in Oklahoma) in asking the court to reexamine and strike down the ancient doctrine that States may maintain "separate but equal" facilities, such as schools, without violating the Fourteenth Amendment's injunction on the States not to deny to any person "the equal protection of the laws." Texas, on the other hand, asked that the "separate but equal" ruling in the Plessy case of 1896 be reaffirmed.

Vinson specifically stated that the court could not agree that in the Texas case there should be such a reaffirmation. But in the next sentence Vinson said there likewise was no need to reexamine the Plessy doctrine.

The net of the two school decisions thus was that States may continue to practice segregation if—and it now becomes a tremendous "if"—they provide substantially equal facilities. The two cases decided concern graduate schools where the expense of duplicate facilities is tremendous for the poorer Southern States.

"Equal Facilities" Issue

The decisions do not specifically affect grade or high schools or even undergraduate colleges in the 17 States and the District of Columbia where segregation exists. But the line of reasoning would seem to cover them all. The recent Court of Appeals decision in the Arlington County school case appears, for example, to be in line with yesterday's high court rulings.

Pending the equalization of facilities, under yesterday's ruling, States must admit Negroes to their graduate schools. But the implication also was clear that they may revert to segregation once substantially equal facilities are provided. Only when that is done, it now appears, will be Supreme Court consider whether a student may be excluded from a State-supported school merely because of his race without violating the Constitution.

These were the three cases decided yesterday:

1. Railroad dining cars. Elmer W. Henderson, now of Washington, was refused service on a Southern Railway Co. diner in 1942 because there were no empty seats at tables reserved for Negroes although there were seats a tables for whites. The Interstate Commerce Commission, after Henderson brought charges, did alter its regulations but still required a division of tables on a race basis with a curtain between the two groups.

Mitchell Case Cited

Burton said the case was parallel to and controlled by the earlier case involving former Representative Mitchell (D., Ill.), who had been denied a Pullman seat because he was a Negro. As it had in that case, the court declared yesterday the ICC and the railroad were causing Negro passengers to be "subjected to undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage" in violation of the ICC Act. Then Burton continued:

"Where a dining car is available to passengers holding tickets entitling them to use it, each such passenger is equally entitled to its facilities in accordance with reasonable regulations. The denial of dining service to any such passenger by the rules before us subjects him to a prohibited disadvantage.

"Under the rules only four Negro passengers may be served at once time and then only at the table reserved for Negroes. Other Negroes who present themselves are compelled to await a vacancy at that table, although there may be many vacancies elsewhere in the diner. The railroad thus refuses to extend to those passengers the use of its existing and unoccupied facilities. The rules impose a like deprivation upon white passengers whenever more than 40 of them seek to be served at the same time and the table reserved for Negroes is vacant.

"We need not multiply instances in which these rules sanction unreasonable discriminations. The curtains, partitions and signs emphasize the artificiality of a difference in treatment which serves only to call attention to a racial classification of passengers holding identical tickets and using the same public dining facility."

Burton swept aside arguments that in general enough seats were provided for Negroes and that the white passengers have the same disadvantages as the Negroes. He declared that "discriminations that operate to the disadvantage of two groups are not the less to be condemned because their impact is broader than if only one were affected."

The court ordered the lower court to set aside the ICC order and to tell the ICC to change its rules in line with the decision.

2. University of Texas. The Chief Justice said this and the following Oklahoma case presented different aspects of a single question: "To what extent does the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment limit the power of a State to distinguish between students of different races in professional and graduate education in a State university?"

Court Sticks to Tradition

Vinson said "broader issues"—meaning a reexamination of the "separate but equal" issue—had been advanced by the court was adhering "to the principle of deciding constitutional questions only in the context of the particular case before the court." He said the court had frequently declared it would decide constitutional questions "only when necessary to the disposition of the case at hand . . ."

The Chief Justice took the unusual step of adding:

"Because of this traditional reluctance to extend constitutional interpretations to situations or facts which are not before the court, much of the excellent research and detailed argument presented in these cases is unnecessary to their disposition."

Sweatt first asked admission to the Texas law school in 1946 and was refused because he was a Negro. At that time there was no Negro law school. Sweatt's legal moves resulted in the setting up of such a school, however, and the State courts held its facilities were "substantially equivalent" to those at the white school.

No "Substantial Equality"

At some length, Vinson compared the number of faculty members, of students and of law library books in each. He noted that the Negro school "is apparently on the road to full accreditation." But the court ruled it still does not offer "substantial equality," and the Chief Justice added that "it is difficult to believe that one who had a free choice between these law schools would consider the question close."

Then Vinson went on:

"Moreover, although the law is a highly learned profession, we are well aware that it is an intensely practical one. The law school, the proving ground for legal learning and practice, cannot be effective in isolation from the individuals and institutions with which the law interacts. Few students and no one who has practiced law would choose to study in an academic vacuum, removed from the interplay of ideas and the exchange of views with which the law is concerned."

He noted that the white school represents 85 percent of the State's population, most of its lawyers, witnesses, jurors, judges and "other officials with whom petitioner (Sweatt) will inevitably be dealing when he becomes a member of the Texas bar."

"With such a substantial and significant segment of society excluded" from the Negro school, Vinson continued, "we cannot conclude that the education offered petitioner is substantially equal to that which he would receive if admitted to the University of Texas Law School."

Vinson swept aside contentions that the exclusion of Negroes was not different from the exclusion of whites from the Negro school. He said that overlooked "realities." Vinson said the two school cases concern "rights which are personal and present" and cited previous rulings along the same line.

The Chief Justice concluded that Sweatt could "claim his full constitutional right: legal education equivalent to that offered by the State to studens of other races." The opinion flatly stated in conclusion that the Fourteenth Amendment's equal protection clause "requires" Sweatt to be admitted to the white law school.

3. University of Oklahoma. McLaurin, seeking a doctorate degree in education, had been admitted to the graduate school as a result of previous Supreme Court rulings but the State forced him to sit, eat and study in segregated areas within the same classroom, cafeteria and library as used by white students.

Vinson termed McLaurin's case "perhaps the epitome" of the need "for trained leaders" in an "increasingly complex" society. He noted that those who are later taught by McLaurin will be affected by the education he receives.

Vinson said:

"It may be argued that appellant (McLaurin) will be in no better position when these restrictions are removed for he may still be set apart by his fellow students. This we think irrelevant. There is a vast difference—a constitutional difference—between restrictions imposed by the State which prohibit the intellectual commingling of students and the refusal of individuals to commingle where the State presents no such bar."

The court concluded that the segregation enforced on McLaurin deprived him "of his personal and present right to the equal protection of the laws." Once having been admitted to the white State-supported graduate school, the court held, McLaurin "must receive the same treatment at the hands of the State as students of the other races."

Whirlwind Census Pace Ends Today

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

The big push in the 1950 nose-count of the District is on.

Double shifts were operating at both Census Bureau offices in the District yesterday and last night.

Clerical workers were sent out to join enumerators in "callbacks" on a few hundred families apparently absent from home since April.

The target date for cleaning up the callback situation is noon today. Then comes the laborius count, tally sheet by tally sheet. Officials hope to announce the preliminary figure for the District by Sunday.

The exclamation "Never again!" is heard frequently these days in the district census offices headed by Lewin Lugar, at 1622 H st. nw., and Norman Russell, at 24th st. and Oklahoma ave. ne.

Washington is regarded by census people as one of the three toughest cities in the country to enumerate. The others are New York and Los Angeles.

Not that people are less cooperative here—not one resident has been taken to court for refusing information—but they just don't stay home. At one time the two offices had 20,000 callbacks to make, officials say.

"Many enumerators made as many as 12 or 15 callbacks to the same places," Lugar reports. "Of course, we found out that some people were just dodging us."

Enumerators are permitted to get information from neighbors after calling four times at different times of day. But the neighbor business doesn't work too well.

"Either people in the District don't know their neighbors, don't want to know them, or they're afraid to give out any information about them," one official said.

By hiring workers at $1 an hour instead of 7 cents per person ttallied, the "known" callbacks were whittled down to about 50 as of last Saturday.

Since April, enumerators' tally sheets have gone through two separate editings, and those found incomplete or otherwise unsatisfactory have been checked at homes again. The sheets also have been chcked against maps of the city which show all dwelling units.

Missed persons still are sending in individual census report forms clipped from newspapers, or telephoning the offices.

In most cases they already have been covered by an enumerator who talked to another member of the family.

After the preliminary count, all material will be sent to the Suitland (Md.) area office of the census for the official machine count, it was explained by R. W. Rensing, assistant to Albert E. Craig, area supervisor. Craig's area covers Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina, as well as the District.

When the final population figures are in, the Census Bureau will get to work on breaking them down into tables showing age groups, school attendance, race, sex, potential number of voters, foreign born, occupations, and a lot of other statistics.

Bethesda Parking Lot Unit Asked

Montgomery County Manager Irving C. McNayr last night proposed to the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce that it appoint a committee to recommend sites for parking lots.

McNayr, who said there was approximately $20,000 revenue from parking meters on Wisconsin ave. which could be used to start purchase of parking lot sites in Bethesda, further proposed that the suggested chamber-appointed committee name a volunteer purchasing agent whose recommendations could be forwarded through McNayr to the county council.

The county manager also said that the $500,000 provided by the recently passed Bethesda parking lot bill would all be used this year but, if needed, more money could be obtained next year.

Dorothy Himsted, a council member, spoke on the legislative history of the Bethesda parking lot bill, and Edward A. McCabe, legislative counsel of the governmental affairs bureau, United States Chamber of Commerce, spoke on cooperation between the local and national chambers.

The chamber, which will not meet again until October, voted for its board of directors to name a committee to study the effect on Bethesda of a new courthouse in Rockville. The chamber met at the Kenwood Country Club.

Mrs. Pittman's Employe Held

March 22 and a lookout was flashed over the country.

Police said Moulding deposited a $25,000 check bearing Mrs. Pittman's signature to his own account while in her employe.

In addition, they said, he sent his former wife in Indianapolis several checks carrying the same signature. He also bought an $8800 home in that city with the same sort of check, police declared.

They said he paid air travel checks for 1948 and 1949 totaling $6000 with similar checks.

Federal Bureau of Investigation records show Moulding worked as an engineer with the War Department in 1941 and 1942.

Police said Moulding cashed bad checks in Sweden; served six months for false pretenses in Kansas City; served six months in Pasadena, Calif., for vagrancy and impersonation; was sentenced to 108 days in Los Angeles for vagrancy, but escaped from a road camp a month later; and was once arrested in New York on a grand larceny charge. All offenses took place between 1919 and 1933, records showed.

the President may not in a period of crisis seek the advice and assistance of his fellow Americans."

The Chief Executive, from all indications, has been loath to set up any new machinery because of his faith in the job being done by Seth Richardson and other members of the Loyalty Review Board.

In a speech before the Federal Bar Association here on April 24, Mr. Truman praised the members of the Loyalty Review Board, and pointed out that it was made up about half and half of Republicans and Democrats.

The President, in that same speech, said that, thanks to the loyalty program, not a single person adjudged to be a Communist remains on the Government pay roll. He invited anybody who knew of a Communist in the Government service to give his information to the Attorney General.

Senator Tydings called at the White House yesterday afternoon, presumably to talk to Mr. Truman about selection of the citizens who are to check an Senator McCarthy's charges about the State Department.

Tydings went in and out of a side door of the White House with the result that reporters waiting in the lobby had no chance to talk to him.

White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross declined to throw any light on the Truman-Tydings conference, answering all questions with a "No comment."

Van Beuren Is Called Before Tydings Group

By the United Press

Archbold Van Beuren, wartime security chief of the Office of Strategic Services, was ordered yesterday to appear before Senate Communist investigators Wednesday for questioning about the Amerasia stolen secrets case.

The decision to call him was announced by Chairman Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) after the investigators had spent some time questioning Immanel S. Larsen, one of two men fined in the mystery-shrouded 5-year-old affair.

Tydings refused to reveal details of Larsen's testimony but said he will be recalled today. He said Van Beuren, who has been quoted as criticizing the committee's methods, will be questioned behind closed doors.

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), who claims the case is the "key" to his Red charges against the State Department, said Van Beuren wrote that the committee decided not to call him after learning he would not discredit the testimony of former OSS agent Frank Bielaski.

Bielaski, who already has been before the committee, led the first raid on the New York offices of the magazine Amerasia in 1945. The raid turned up hundreds of secret diplomatic and military papers and eventually led to the arrest of six persons.

Charges Filed For Dismissal Of Remington

Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer yesterday filed formal dismissal charges against William W. Remington, $10,000-a-year department economist whose loyalty is being investigated by Congress.

While the bill of particulars was not disclosed, Sawyer had emphasized previously he was acting in the interest of "good administration" and not loyalty grounds.

Sawyer last week filed similar charges against Michael Lee, Manchurian-born chief of the Far Eastern branch of the department's Office of International Trade. His loyalty also is being checked.

Both men professed their complete loyalty and refused to resign when Sawyer handed them a quit-or-be-fired ultimatum. He said then he would accuse them of inefficiency if they didn't quit.

Remington, who has remained at his desk despite the dismissal threat, had no comment on the charges.

"I'm working here on Government business," he said.

Sawyer's action followed a warning by a Senate Commerce subcommittee either to get rid of Lee or face a full-dress investigation of the department. Lee accused him of being afraid to face the threatened inquiry. He also said Sawyer was undermining the Federal loyalty program.

Oregon Judge Accused of Being a Red

By The Associated Press

Daniel C. Mahoney, Portland, Oreg., Federal Court law clerk, told a Senate Judiciary subcommittee yesterday he believes acting U. S. District Judge Gus T. Solomon of Portland is a Communist.

Judge Solomon, who sat silently through Mahoney's testimony, told reporters later "there's no truth to it."

"I am not now, nor have I ever been, a member of the Communist Party," Solomon added, "and I never have been sympathetic with any of the aims or purposes of the Communist Party."

Mahoney made his attack at a hearing by the subcommittee on President Truman's nomination of Solomon to a regular position on the bench on which he now serves by interim appointment.

The subcommittee recessed till Friday morning, when, Chairman McCarran (D., Nev.) said, two witnesses named by Mahoney as willing to substantiate his charges will be brought here from Portland.

Mahoney, 30-year-old former pilot in World War II, told the committee "I feel he (Solomon) is a member of that apparatus whose primary duty-loyalty is to overthrow the Government of the United States and replace it with a Soviet government."

Naval Academy Appointments Ordered Reduced by 20 Pct.

The Navy yesterday announced it is cutting the number of appointments to the Naval Academy by nearly 20 percent—a move expected eventually to stabilize the Annapolis school at approximately 3000 Midshipmen.

Vice Admiral John W. Roper, chief of naval personnel, disclosed the action in a memorandum to all members of Congress. It will curtail the number of appointments each member can make to the academy from five to four.

Officials said overcrowding of Bancroft Hall—the huge dormitory on the Severn—and the need for economy are responsible for the step.

Roper told the Congressmen that there are living quarters at the academy for 2750 Midshipmen, but that about 3400 now are there and by next October the number will reach 3700.

Rather than ask "in these times of essential retrenchment" for expansion of facilities, "a reduction in the size of the brigade of Midshipmen is the acceptable alternative." It is estimated that it would cost $28,000,000 to enlarge the school to continue on a five-appointments-per-Congressman basis.

"It has been decided after due consideration of all factors involved, including an analysis of long-range officer requirements for the Navy and the Naval Academy allocation to the Air Force", said Roper, "to reduce from five to four the number of congressional appointments, along with a corresponding reduction in other quotas, except that Presidential appointments will not be reduced."

Effective Next Year

There are 75 Presidential appointments, limited to sons of personnel of the regular services. A 20-percent cut will be made in the 160 appointments now made from among enlisted men of the fleet and the 160 authorized for Naval Reservists.

Roper said the cutback will not be effective until the class entering a year from now. It will be put into effect by proposing language and cutting funds in the 1952 defense budget and limiting the number of appointments.

He declared that the action has been approved by Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson and Secretary of the Navy Francis Matthews. The chairman of the Senate and House Committees on Armed Services and appropriations were consulted ahead of time, Roper said.

Naval officials said the decision to cut back appointments was taken to meet the situation presented by overcrowding at the Academy, hte unlikelihood of getting funds for an expansion and the fact that more young men now are seeking appointments, bringing about a mounting enrollment.

They said the move did not stem from any slashing of future officer requirements for the fleet, but they could not estimate now whether there will be a reduced number of officers in service in the future or whether a greater percentage will be taken from other sources.

These officials pointed out that it will be five years before smaller classes will emerge from the Academy under the move and said this is too far ahead to estimate what the operating forces of the Navy will be then.

Criticizing the cutback, Representative Lansdale Sasscer (D.,Md.) termed it another Defense Department move "directed to the stripping down of the Navy, Marine Corps and their air arms as offensive potential in time of emergency."

Sasscer released a letter he had written Secretary Matthews, urging that the directive be reconsidered. The Naval Academy is in Sasscer's district.

"As a member of the Armed Services Committee, I have been alarmed for some time at the persistent and progressive weakening of our Navy, to which the provisions of this recent directive contribute," Sasscer said.

He called the cutback "hard to reconcile" with Defense Department appeals for an extension of the draft act.

Rescue Squad Projected in Southwest

The Southwest Citizens Association last night decided to form a rescue squad to handle waterfront emergencies during the summer months.

Lloyd Jones, recording secretary, said the squad would be formed by Southwest residents and be used exclusively in the Southwest except in unusual situations.

A committee was appointed to lay plans. Jones said the squad probably would not begin operations this year.

Meeting in the Southwest Branch Library, the association adopted a new constitution and ordered its executive board to take steps to incorporate the association.

Michigan Park

After listening to a debate on the Kefauver bill, the Michigan Park Citizens Association last night voted against indorsing the measure.

Ralph W. Donnelly, second vice president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, argued for the bill and James Beatty, representing the Board of Trade, opposed it.

In other action at the meeting in the Bunker Hill School, the group asked that the McKinley pool be reserved for white swimmers.

National Gateway

The National Gateway Citizens Association last night adjourned its meetings until the first Monday in October. Vice President Gordon Ferris presided at the session in the Church of Christ, 28th and Douglas sts. ne.

which was en route south spotted the "S O S."

The plane radioed at 9:49 p. m. (EST) that one of her two engines was dead and she was turning back in an effort to reach Nassau, about 150 miles away.

Twenty minutes later came a terse second message:

"Still losing altitude. Now 200 feet. Looks like I'm going in the drink."

That was the last word from the missing craft.

Stock Market Tumbles Sharply As Traders Cash In

New York, June 5 (AP).—Stock traders cashed in on their profits today and the market took one of the sharpest tumbles of the year.

Final prices were down a few cents to about $3 a share.

Steel and automobile issues were the first to feel the selling pressure. Railroad, radio-television, oil and rubber shares fell in line later and finally the entire market was affected.

Brokers saw nothing special in the news to account for the decline. The market has been advancing for nearly a year, however, and a setback of some kind appeared to be due—long overdue.

Police Spur Hunt For 2 Fugitives After Snaring One

Shelby, N. C., June 5 (AP).—Police in the Southeastern States tonight hunted a man and wife they said have zigzagged through the area in stolen vehicles since they exchanged shots with a Tennessee highway patrolman four days ago. Their alleged accomplice in the Chattanooga escapade was captured early today in Spartanburg, S. C.

A search was on for Carl Baskin Hensley, 34, and Martha Louise Hill Hensley, about 35, of Spartanburg. Highway patrolmen today thought they saw the couple in this area today, but lost the automobile after a chase.

Before dawn Edward Clyde McCallister, 34, of Huntsville, Ala., was captured in a truck at Spartanburg and police said the Hensleys sped away in an automobile which preceded the truck.

McCallister denied he was one of three persons who exchanged shots with Lieut. Dainy Garland of the Tennessee Highway Patrol and stole his patrol car containing a machinegun and 500 rounds of ammunition Thursday.

300 Doctors Taught Atomic Attack Duties

New York, June 5 (U.P.). — Instructions on what to do if an atomic bomb hits the city were given to about 300 doctors today.

Dr. James H. Lade, atomic defense director of the New York State Health Department, told the physicians attending a one-day institute on treatment of atomic injuries that they must be ready to have lives in an atomic disaster.

They heard lectures on atomic theory, effects of radiation, decontamination methods, and treatment of atomic casualties.

New York Cotton

New York, June 5 (AP).—Cotton futures weakened today under pressure of profit-taking and hedging after displaying early strength. Final prices were 5 to 50 cents a bale lower.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 5 (AP).—The two major feed grains, corn and oats, held up well in a generally weak market on the Board of Trade today. Everything else suffered a setback.

After a steady start the market underwent a sinking spell when heavy selling hit July soybeans. That contract tumbled 9¾ cents at its low and its sudden plunge unsettled other cereals. Before the close, July beans had staged a fair-sized rally.

Wheat ended 1¾-1⅞ lower, corn was ⅜ lower to ¼ higher, oats were ⅜ lower to ¼ higher, rye was ¾-1½ lower, soybeans were 4¼-5¼ lower and lard was 7 to 25 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Conviction Appeal Lost by Pritchard

The conviction and two-year jail sentence of Edward F. Pritchard, jr., for stuffing Kentucky ballot boxes were upheld by the Supreme Court yesterday.

The court, unable to obtain a quorum to consider the case of the onetime "boy wonder of the New Deal," simply confirmed the lower court ruling against Pritchard. Chief Justice Vinson and Justices Reed, Frankfurter and Clark disqualified themselves. Six is a court quorum.

In other actions of the busiest day of the 1940-50 term, the Supreme Court:

1. Agreed to consider the Dorothy Bailey loyalty case next fall. The court already has agreed to hear two cases also attacking the Government loyalty program's constitutionality.

Alien's Rights Laid Down

2. Decided, 6-to-3, that aliens jailed abroad by American authorities lack the right to apply for court hearings in this country. Justice Jackson delivered an 8000-word majority opinion, while Justice Black dissented and was joined by Justices Douglas and Burton.

Jackson said aliens in this country have court rights but that to extend the privileges to aliens abroad as in time of war would "hamper the war effort and bring aid and comfort to the enemy." The case involved Lothar Eisentrager and other Germans convicted of aiding the Japanese after the German surrender.

3. Again split on a tie vote over the part of the Taft-Hartley labor law's non-Communist oath requiring labor union officials to swear they do not believe in communism. Last month the court upheld a lower court ruling by a 3-to-3 tie vote. This time, in a case involving a New York local union, Justice Douglas joined in Justice Jackson's now-famous dissent, while Justice Minton joined Chief Justice Vinson in upholding the oath.

4. Failed to take any action in the case of Mrs. Ellen Knauff, German-born war bride whom the Justice Department seeks to deport. This apparently will assure her remaining on Ellis Island, New York, at least until the court acts next fall on her petition. A bill has been passed by the House to permit her to remain here.

5. Refused to consider a new plea for freedom by former Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers, sentenced to jail for inducing a business associate to lie before a Senate committee investigating war procurement matters.

6. Refused to consider a decision by lower courts that Negroes may be excluded from Stuyvesant Town, a big New York City public housing development. Justices Black and Douglas favored the review.

7. Ordered rearguments next fall of a case involving the right of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana to sell gasoline to four Detroit jobbers at prices lower than it charged retail service station operators. Arguments were heard some months ago, but apparently the justices could not agree on a decision.

Movie Trust Decree Upheld

8. Upheld a Federal Court antitrust decree against Loew's, Inc.; Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., and Twentieth Century - Fox Film Corp. The decree ordered the movie firms to submit plans for divorcing their producing and distributing businesses from that of exhibiting.

9. Upheld the validity of a patent licensing agreement calling for royalty payments whether the patents are used or not. Justice Minton delivered the majority opinion in a 6-to-2 split. Justice Douglas wrote a dissent joined by Justice Black and Justice Jackson took no part.

Alexandria Man Is Indicted By Jury on Letter Charge

An Alexandria insurance man who allegedly attempted to extort money from three principals in a damage suit was indicted by a Federal grand jury yesterday on a charge of using the mail with the intent to extort and to communicate threats.

Nevin G. Bachman, 1121 Portner rd., was accused in the indictment of sending identical copies of a threatening letter to Judge Paul E. Brown, of the Fairfax County Circuit Court; State Senator Andrew W. Clarke, of Belle Haven, and State Delegate Armistead L. Boothe, of Alexandria.

According to the indictment handed down in the United States Court at Alexandria, Bachman sent the letter on or about January 7 of this year "with the intent to extort . . . $950." The letter, the indictment said, also contained the threat to injure the reputation of the three men.

Contents Not Divulged

Court officials declined to divulge contents of the letter or to discuss details of the case. However, Boothe said the letter was the aftermath of a Fairfax County suit in which he represented Bachman and Clarke represented a trucking company. Judge Brown presided.

According to Boothe, Bachman was made liable for damages which resulted from a collision between his automobile and a truck. After the issue was decided by a jury, Boothe said, Bachman wrote the letter and accused the judge and the two attorneys of collusion in determining the outcome.

Boothe said Bachman demanded $950 as compensation for damage to his own automobile and threatened to smear the reputations of the three as an alternative.

Bribe Attempt Charged

Another indictment handed down yesterday charged Wayne Criley of Flushing, N. Y., with attempted bribery of an employe of the Army Engineer Board at Fort Belvoir.

Other indictments named Thelma D. Lewis, 615 S. Columbus st., Alexandria, accused of assault with a dangerous weapon at Fort Belvoir; Robert L. August, 804 N. Kenmore st., Arlington, a former substitute mail handler at the Arlington postoffice, who was accused of embezzling a letter containing $7.50 in cash; Andrew Woodrow King, Dumfries, Va., charged with altering a Government check to make it payable in the sum of $383.80 instead of $3.80; Howard F. Dishman, jr., 1537 1st st. nw., accused of interstate transportation of a stolen vehicle; Cleven Pate, Fort Belvoir, charged with theft of a camera on the military reservation; Thomas W. Daniels, a prisoner at the District workhouse, charged with escape from the institution; Charles C. Carr, address unknown, theft of a motorcycle, and Paul L. Junkins, address unknown, forgery.

Holober Plea For Writ of Error Heard

Richmond, Va., June 5 (AP). — Justice Willis D. Miller of the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals today received a petition for a writ of error for Charles Francis Holober, 41, condemned to death for the murder of his wife.

The petition was presented orally by T. Brooke Howard, counsel for the 41-year-old former Washington taxicab driver. Holober was convicted by a Fairfax County Circuit Court jury on January 13. He pleaded insanity.

Howard contended Holober was denied a fair trial because of remarks made by the trial judge that may have prejudiced the jury, the jury's verdict was not supported by the evidence, and the trial court erred in its instructions to the jury.

The petition listed seven assignments of error. One of these was that the record indicated the jury "was biased and prejudiced and ignored medical testimony in arriving at its verdict."

Meanwhile, Governor Battle has disclosed he requested and has received a psychiatric report on Holober's mental condition. The Governor was out of the city today but his office said the Governor's request was made prior to the filing of Holober's petition with the Supreme Court and that there would be nothing available on the report while the case is pending before the court.

Bodies of Holober's wife and 10-month-old baby were found February 27, 1949, in an abandoned nudiest camp in Fairfax County. He admitted at the trial he shot Mrs. Holober and buried her body and the baby, still alive, in the nudist camp grave.

House Judiciary Committee recently approved a bill to turn the tidelands over to the States with a share of the income going to the Government.

Douglas said for a unanimous court that the Louisiana case presented no real difference from that of California, decided in the Government's favor in 1947. He noted that Louisiana claimed rights in an area beginning at the 3-mile marginal belt, extending 24 miles seaward, while California's claim was to the 3-mile belt only. Both actually are beyond "tidelands" but that name has been applied to all the cases.

Douglas reasoned that the outer area is "perhaps even more directly related to national defense, the conduct of foreign affairs and world commerce" than the 3-mile area. The court had used Federal control of these matters as a basis for its California decision.

Justices Jackson and Clark took no part in either case. Justice Frankfurter wrote a short opinion, neither concurring or dissenting. He said the majority opinion in the Texas case presented a "puzzle" to him. In this case, Douglas was joined by Chief Justice Vinson and Justices Black and Burton. Justices Reed and Minton dissented.

Douglas based his decision on the fact that Texas entered the Union in 1845 by a congressional resolution declaring she came in on an "equal footing" with the other States. Douglas said:

Texas' Entry Into Union

"When Texas came into the Union she ceased to be an independent nation. She then became a sister State on an 'equal footing' with all the other States. That act concededly entailed a relinquishment of some of her sovereignty.

"In external affairs the United States became the sole and exclusive spokesman for the Nation. We hold that as an incident to the transfer of that sovereignty any claim that Texas may have had to the marginal sea was relinquished to the United States."

Douglas said the fact that the Texas Legislature has claimed a boundary extending to the outer edge of the continental shelf, far into the Gulf of Mexico, made no difference. He assumed that, as a republic, Texas owned the marginal lands but he said that made no difference.

Reed and Minton, however, took the position that the "equal footing" part of the annexation act had never before "been interpreted to take away from a newly admitted State property that it had heretofore owned." They said the annexation had left the disputed areas in Texas' control.

Frankfurter declared that the court majority was deciding "that when Texas entered the Union she lost what she had and the United States acquired it. How that shift came to pass remains for me a puzzle."

After the California decision, royalties from oil taken from its tidelands were put into a special fund, pending legislation by Congress. The agreement between the State and the Federal Government to do this and to permit oil drilling to continue meanwhile brought a request from former Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes to investigate the matter. The Supreme Court yesterday rejected his suggestion without explanation.

Officials of California and the Federal Government recently have been conferring with William H. Davis, named by the court, in an effort to agree on disposition of the case. But they are still discussing how to determine the exact boundaries between State and Federal areas and have yet to get down to drawing an actual line.

Hearing Set On Extension Of 2 Avenues

A public hearing on the proposed extension of Constitution and Independence aves. through the Northeast and Southeast sections of the District was scheduled yesterday by the Commissioners for June 19 at 10 a. m. in the board room of the District Building.

Under the proposal, B st. ne., extending from Capitol Plaza to the Anacostia River, would be renamed Constitution ave. and B st. se., from the plaza to the Anacostia, would be renamed Independence ave.

The streets are extensions of the two avenues which flank the Mall.

Renaming the streets would be a step in the plan to develop the East Capitol st. area from B st. se. to B st. ne. into a park similar to the Mall. The development plan calls for public buildings eventually to be constructed in the area.

The two B streets now run through primarily residential areas.

Appeal Denied To 7 Negroes In Rape Case

By The Associated Press

The Supreme Court yesterday refused to review the trials of seven Virginia Negroes condemned to death for raping a white woman.

The refusal lets stand unchanged a decision by the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals which upheld the convictions.

The men were convicted in Martinsville, Va., of raping Mrs. Ruby Stroud Floyd, 32. She was attacked along a railroad track, while on her way to collect money for some clothing she had sold.

Four of the seven were scheduled to go to the electric chair on May 26. The others were to be electrocuted on June 2. They are now on 60-day reprieves.

Tagging Some of the Bases

THE DETROIT TIGERS now own the two extremes in American League pitchers in young Art Houtteman, who throws the league's best fast ball, and Freddie Hutchinson, who merely nudges his slow stuff up to the plate.

Houtteman posted his third shut-out victory the other day, and the Philadelphia Sportswriters Association was moved recently to take due notice of his sensational come-back. Little more than a year ago, the 22-year-old Houtteman was languishing in a Florida hospital with his skull fractured in an auto crash.

POVICH

At Philadelphia, Houtteman was voted "The Year's Most Courageous Athlete." Teammate Hutchinson, also called on to speak at the testimonial, registered a vigorous dissent. "For pure courage, I should have won that award," said Hutch. "Houtteman can throw his stuff right past 'em. It takes more fortitude to stand out there like I do and shove my kind of junk at the hitters."

ONLY WITH the greatest reluctance will Bucky Harris promote his man Mickey Harris to the status of a starting pitcher, supposedly the ambition of every relief guy. "He's too big a help to us in the late innings," says Bucky.

Mickey is quite content with his relief job and, in fact, is beginning to qualify as the poor man's Joe Page. He has even thieved some of Page's habits like jumping the bull-pen fence when he is called, as swaggering onto the mound as if to say "Relax, men, I have arrived."

Then Mickey turns a mean look at the hitter before beginning to pour the ball, which he can do for a few innings. He hasn't turned in a bad job yet.

BUCK NEWSOM is still making news in the Southern Association. He's quarreling with his boss, President Joe Engel of the Chattanooga club.

After the Atlanta club knocked him out of the box the other night, Newsom dressed and joined Engel on the roof adjoining the press box. Engel accused him of not staying in playing condition, and there were hot words that ended in fighting gestures. Before a blow was struck, there was intervention from their press box neighbors, but Newsom is now out of favor with Engel.

EDDIE ROBINSON, who hit only one home run for the Nats in 35 games, joined the White Sox and immediately clouted another homer on his first day in a Chicago uniform. However, Bucky Harris continues to stoutly defend his deal that sent Robbie and Ray Scarborough to the Sox.

"How many homers did Robbie hit for us?" Harris asked a critic.

"One."

"And where did he hit it?' persisted Harris.

"At Yankee Stadium."

"Where did he hit that one for the White Sox?" asked Harris.

"At Yankee Stadium."

"Humph,' said Harris.

ACCORDING TO a Sporting News dispatch, the Dick Wakefield case precipitated the discharge of Jack Onslow as manager of the White Sox. It brought to a head the year-old feud between Onslow and General Manager Frank Lane.

Before he made the deal for Wakefield with the Yankees, Lane told reporters, "I asked Onslow if he wanted him and Onslow said he'd play Wakefield regularly in our outfield. Then I read in the papers that Onslow is saying 'What good would Wakefield do the Sox?'"

Before the month was out, Onslow was out, too, and Red Corriden was the new Chicago manager. Lane had tried to move Onslow out at the end of the 1949 season, but the Comiskey family objected to buying up the second year of his contract. Lane was able to win his point when the Sox got off to a bad start this year.

Lane is now saying that Corriden is no stop-gap manager, and will be given a contract for 1951 if his work merits the job. But at any respectable betting joint they'll tell you Luke Appling is sure-shot to be managing the Sox next year.

THE ATHLETICS, who were supposed to be a factor in the American League pennant race, hit their absolute nadir the other day when they slipped into the league cellar for a couple of hours after losing the first game of a double header with the Browns.

Connie Mack is not only pained at the collapse of his once-solid ball club, but he must be suffering financial pains, too. With the Red Sox as the attraction, the A's drew only 8134 to their opening game of the season. The Decoration Day double header with the Nats attracted only 9557.

The Phillies have stolen the show completely in Philadelphia, where the American League has been dominant for more than 30 years. Only because he was shielded by the dugout, did Mr. Mack avoid hearing the radios of thousands of fans at the A's game on Decoration Day tuned into the broadcasts of the Phillies out-of-town double header with Brooklyn.

Sugar Ray Butchers Villemain, Wins 'Title'

By Jack Hand

Philadelphia, June 5 (AP).—Sugar Ray Robinson butchered game Robert Villemain of France with every punch known to man tonight to earn the Pennsylvania version of the "World" Middleweight Championship on a unanimous 15-round decision.

The squat Villemain, a 5-to-1 underdog with a concrete jaw, simply refused to crumble under Robinson's savage attack. He went down for a two-count from a right hand to the head in the twelfth but he swarmed back to harass Sugar Ray.

In an eleventh round flurry, the lean and limber Robinson drove home four straight right hand punches that would have bowed the legs of a stock yard steer. Robert merely blinked his swollen eyes and came forward.

Robinson Slips

The crowd of 22,004, which paid a gross of $119,007.49, rocked and roared in the thirteenth when Villemain, punchig from memory, stepped back in amazement as Robinson slipped to the floor. Referee Charley Daggert ruled it was no knockdown but it had the same effect.

Back on his feet, the welterweight champion who now holds two crowns in at least the State of Pennsylvania, simply was too much fighter for the game Parisian.

It was a lopsided decision with two judges, Frank Knaresborough and Harry Lasky finding for Sugar Ray 12-3. Referee Daggert had Robinson out front 10-5. The AP score card saw it 11-3 with one even and Robinson a stickout winner.

This was a Mutt and Jeff spectacle with violence. Sugar Ray, 5-foot-11½, towered over 5-foot-6 Bob. Robinson, at 155, gave away weight to the 159½-pound Villemain but it didn't matter.

He used his reach and height to good advantage. Time after time he flicked or ripped his searing left to Villemain's face while standing off his opponent. Only in the middle round was Robert able to move inside and pour punches to the body in his usual style. He, too, slipped, for no count in the ninth.

Although the National Boxing Association refused to go along with Pennsylvania's title claims for this bout, it ruled that the winner of the June 28 battle at New York's Polo Grounds between Champion Jake Lamotta and former Rocky Graziano must meet Robby within 90 days.

Hoot Slams 2 Run Homer And Triple With 3 On

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Hoot Evers of the Tigers kept the Nats' losing streak painfully alive last night by administering a bases-loaded triple and a two-run homer that gave the miseries to 12,630 Griffith Stadium fans.

By a score of 7 to 4, the Nats absorbed their sixth straight licking, traceable in large measure to the long-distance clouting of Evers.

The Tigers, the league's road masters who have lost only 3 of their 22 games away from Briggs Stadium, conked Steve Nagy for four runs in the opening inning and the Nats never recovered from that asault.

Evers Alone Beats Nats

They whacked away at Dizzy Trout for 11 hits to match the Tigers' total, but their wallops lacked the authority of Evers' two overwhelming smacks. He personally outscored the Nats with five runs driven in.

The Nats' defeat wasn't Irv Noren's fault. He banged out four consecutive hits, including a two-bagger, and raised his average from .279 to .301 during the night, but he was playing almost a lone hand.

Trout, given his four-run lead at the start, was pouring the ball. Five Nats went down swinging at his lively slider and he walked nobody after the first inning.

Lipon Starts Big Inning

Johnny Lipon saluted Nagy at the outset with an infield single and the Tigers were otherwise blessed while getting their four runs in the first. Kell followed with a single to right that moved Lipon to second and then, with one out, his defensive cast betrayed Nagy. Dente and Stewart shooed each other away from Wertz's pop in left field and it fell safely.

Even so, Dente retrieved the ball in time to force the cautious Lipon at third, but a poor throw bounced out of Yost's glove and Yost was charged with an error that filled the bases. That's when Evers scored everybody with his three-base smash into left center. Groth's double to left got Evers home.

The Nats suddenly stirred up four consecutive singles with two out in the third to get two runs back for Nagy. Michaels singled to center, Noren singled to left and Robertson got a run-laden single to left. Ostrowski singled to right for the second run.

Tigers Score Again

In the fourth, though, the Tigers came up with a cheaply scored run to lift their lead to 5-2. Trout was safe when his single took a weird hop over Yost's head, and went to second on Lipon's single with one out. Priddy grounded to Yost on a perfect double play chance, but Yost threw wild to first after stepping on third for a force play.

George Kell, maker of four of the Tigers' hits, thereupon drove in the run with a single to center.

It was in the seventh that Evers put the ball game beyond reclaim. After Wertz singled to center with one out, Evers bashed his sixth homer of the year far into the left center stands, a 400-foot drive.

Dick Weik held the Tigers safely in the last two innings, but the Nats couldn't get to first base against Trout.

Bosox Clout Chisox, 12-0; Stephens Stars

Boston, June 5 (AP).—Lefty Maury McDermott put together a neat four-hitter tonight while pitching the Boston Red Sox to a 12-0 shutout over the Chicago White Sox. Junior Sephens clinched matters early by clouting his 11th homer of the season with two runners aboard in the first inning.

The Red Sox opened with Ellis Kinder, who has a record of 11 consecutive wins over Chicago, but that right hander left the game with a kink in his left shoulder after issuing passes to Nelson Fox and Dave Philley with one out in the opening session.

The White Sox left 12 runners stranded during the first five innings, for McDermott gave up seven additional bases on balls over that stretch, during which Phil Masi doubled and singled and Fox banged a two-bagger.

X-Rays Show Coan Has Skull Fracture

Gil Coan has a definite skull fracture, additional X-rays taken at Georgetown Hospital yesterday revealed.

Preliminary X-rays taken shortly after he was injured last Friday night revealed a linear fracture, but Dr. George Resta, Nats' team physician, X-rayed the young outfielder again yesterday to be certain.

"He will remain in the hospital for another two weeks and can't play again for at least a month," Dr. Resta said.

Cubs' Pitcher Turns to Wrestling In Infield to Save New 'Store' Teeth

Chicago, June 5 (AP).—A mid-infield fracas between Dodger Outfielder Jim Russell and Cub Pitcher Paul Minner today ended in a wrestling match instead of a punching bout because Minner wanted to to protect a new $180 bridge-work.

At least that was Minner's explanation of why he wrestled Russell to the ground just off the mound when the Dodger outfielder stormed out for battle from the plate during Brooklyn's 13-1 rout of the Cubs.

The fracas happened in the fourth inning when the two exchanged words as Russell had to duck a pitch. Russell suddenly beelined onto the field and Minner rushed off the mound to meet him.

There were no blows struck as Minner grabbed Russell and wrestled him to the ground. In an instant other players rushed over to separate them.

Russell was chased from the game and Minner continued to pitch.

Dodgers Blast Cubs, 13-1; Preacher Roe Has 3-Hitter

Chicago, June 5 (AP).—A mid-diamond wrestling brawl, a three-hit pitching job by Preacher Roe, six Cub errors and a 16-hit Dodger attack marked a zany 13-1 Brooklyn triumph over Chicago before 16,626 at Wrigley Field today.

Roe pitched a brilliant game for his sixth win against three losses. The Preacher faced only 28 Cub batters, two of the three Bruin hits being nullified by double plays. The other hit was Hank Sauer's seventh homer of the season in the fifth inning. Thus, the Cubs had none left on base tying an "unbreakable" record.

Roe hurled only 89 pitches, including 27 called balls.

Dodger Catcher Roy Campanella and Third Baseman Bobby Morgan also hit home runs amid the confusion of an impromptu wrestling match between Cub Pitcher Paul Minner and Dodger Outfielder Jim Russell.

The Cubs handled the ball generally like a hot potato, but the real eye-opener came in the second. After Gil Hodges singled, Minner trapped him off first. Cub First Sacker Phil Cavarretta dropped Minner's throw as Hodges broke for second. Cavarretta whipped the ball clear into left field and Hodges came all the way home.

Bob Kennedy's Homer Wins For Tribe, 3-2

New York, June 5 (AP).—Bobby Feller retired two pinch hitters with the tying run on second base to halt a New York ninth-inning rally as the Cleveland Indians nipped the Yankees, 3 to 2, tonight. Bob Kennedy's sixth-inning home run provided the winning margin before a crowd of 57,629.

Feller had a three-hit shutout going into the last half of the ninth but Joe Dimaggio greeted the righthander wit ha home run. A pass to Gene Woodling followed by Cliff Mapes' double to center brought in another Yankee run.

At this point Yankee Manager Casey Stengel inserted two pitchers as pinch hitters — lefthanded hitting Ed Lopat and Tommy Byrne but both failed.

Citation's Handlers Plan Maryland Swan Song for Champ

Calumet Ace To Wind Up At Pimlico

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Delaware Park, June 5.—Plans for Citation, who broke the world record for the mile and became the all-time money-winner champion last Saturday, call for the the Calumet ace to run his last race in Maryland, the scene of his turf debut.

Citation will be campaigned conservatively during the remainder of the season and, providing he stands up, will end his sensational career at Pimlico this fall, Trainer Jimmy Jones said in a telephone conversation from California.

The $75,000 Golden Gate Handicap this month will be the final West Coast appearance for the son of Bull Lea who then will be shipped to the Chicago area for tests at Arlington and Washington Park after which he will head East to wind up the most lucrative reign in racing history.

Jones revealed that Citation is not entirely sound. He said, "If Citation is not raced too hard I think he will last out the season. He's got a foreleg that needs special attention. He got his start in Maryland and I'd like to see him say 'goodby' there.

"The race we have picked for him is the Pimlico Special. He won it in a walkover in 1948 but I guess we will get some opposition this year. Of course, things could happen between now and November, but right now you can say he will make his final bow at Pimlico."

Citation definitely will go to the stud next spring, joining Bull Lea, his great sire, on Owner Warren Wright's famous Calumet Farm. While no stud fee has been named for Citation it is likely the figure will be $5000, the present price of a mating to Bull Lea.

Should Citation sing his swan song in Maryland it would be appropriate enough. It was at Havre de Grace on April 22, 1947, that he went postward for the first time to begin a career now studded with 29 victories in 36 starts. He won by a half length in a maiden test.

Rooters Fete W. & L. Crew On Saturday

By Happy Walker

The cheering section of the fabulous Washington and Lee rowing crew will have its innings Saturday evening when W. and L. Booster Club honors the crew members at a banquet, in the school cafeteria starting at 6:30.

Walker

Composed of faculty, parents and well wishers, the Booster Club will pay homage to the blademen, who won the National Championship at Princeton, for a repeat of last year's similar prowess.

Coach Charlie Butt will come in for his share of the glory and rightfully so, for the Navy Department official, who had never coached a crew, prior to his W. and L. assignment, has been the evny of many an older coaching hand.

GEORGETOWN sailing ace, Henry D. Rohrer of Rochester, N. Y., was the selection of the committee to receive the first annual Thomas Lewis Memorial Award for outstanding service to the Georgetown Sailing Club, during the past year.

The Memorial Cup honors former sailing member, Thomas Lewis, who was noted for his outstanding sailing achievements during 1939. Lewis lost his life on February 26, 1942, crashing into the Aaltnaic while on an aerial observation mission. Martin Quigley, editor, Motion Picture Herald, was chairman of the selection committee.

Indian Spring's Sam Dinerman shot a gross 77, and aided by an 11 handicap, carded a 66 to take the amateur sweeps. Teddy McCandlish, assistant pro, and Ed Coffman, jr., of the host club, finished second in the pro-am with a total 64.

Cockrill Hostile, Says Juvenile Aide

effectively treated in their own homes. The Juvenile Court is being changed from a court of chancery to a criminal court, and the purposes for which the Juvenile Court was established is being negated."

At her press conference yesterday Judge Cockrill replied by stating there had been "very few" instances where she had made institutional commitments contrary to the recommendations of the social workers.

She said she had no idea what the commitment rate was, but that she had four persons working on figures which would give the "whole picture" of the operation of the Juvenile Court since she has been on the bench.

"Never . . . In Court"

Asked about Miss Clary's charge on her court-practice, Judge Cockrill replied that the "charge on how the court is conducted was made by a person who has never been present in court during any session I have handled a case."

Asked whether Miss Fagrie had been present during court sessions, Judge Cockrill replied she had. She said it was policy for probation officers in the court to report her decisions to the department of social work.

Judge Cockrill said that in all cases where she had not followed the recommendation of the social department in her decisions, the probation officer in charge of the case was called to the bench and given her reasons for a change in sentencing.

She said these changes resulted in sentences which were "sometimes more severe, sometimes less severe."

For the first time yesterday Judge Cockrill officially revealed she had requested Miss Clary's resignation "on the grounds of inefficiency and failure to assume the administrative responsibilities of her position."

In a letter dated May 19 she pointed out that since she spends so much time on the bench it is "imperative that there be someone in your position in whom I can have absolute confidence and dependence and from whom I can be assured of full loyalty and cooperation. The matters referred to (in the letter) are some of the considerations which have forced me to the reluctant conclusion that you are not meeting these requirements."

In that letter Judge Cockrill called Miss Clary "openly defiant and discourteous" regarding instructions on date-stamping of complaints. Judge Cockrill wrote:

"For some months I have been aware that you have not been in accord with my plans and procedures for improving the operation of the court, and your unwillingness to accept my decisions as administrative head of the court in these matters has reflected itself in lack of cooperation and loyalty on your part to the extent of affecting morale throughout the social work department and to a greater or lesser extent throughout the court. This I have previously discussed with you but without apparent avail as the situation has not improved."

Calls Charge Serious

Miss Clary replied, in a letter dated May 31:

"The very serious charge in your letter, that I have failed to promote high morale, is one which we have discussed on several occasions, I have pointed out that the staff cannot have high morale when the administration is inconsistent and arbitrary. Administrative lines are not utilized either for the purpose of securing information, or for the implementation of decisions. There is no evaluation of former practices, nor any examination of the facts in a given situation. This approach places key people in an untenable position in trying to carry out their normal duties and responsibilities."

Judge Cockrill yesterday flatly denied she "brushed aside" the recommendations of social workers. She said studies were made as formerly, and that her decisions were made on the basis of those studies, supplemented by her observations during court.

Miss Clary also wrote Judge Cockrill: "When I have volunteered suggestions with reference to the social service department, I have been informed that it was no concern of mine. Weeks have gone by without your granting appointments to key people."

"That has never happened," Judge Cockrill said shortly. "I defy her to prove it."

"These attacks are without foundation," Judge Cockrill added. "These letters are the first statements that I have had from either of these two people or anybody else familiar with the operation of the court in connection with my handling of the cases before the court."

Earlier in the conference, Judge Cockrill was asked what she planned to do to restore confidence in the Juvenile Court. A reporter indicated this confidence had been shaken by disclosures of the past week.

Has the Proof, She Says

"I have actual proof of every statement I have made," she said. "I ask you to bear in mind that none of these charges were made against me or against the court until I asked for Miss Clary's resignation."

Judge Cockrill insisted yesterday that Miss Clary's resignation was not as a result of a difference of policy. She called it a result of a difference of administration—"personnel relations and administration."

So far as Miss Fagrie's resignation is concerned, the judge said it apparently was a "difference in philosophy. You have Miss Fagrie's letter. That's all I know about it." Later, she said Miss Fagrie had commended her about three weeks ago on the way she handled cases in court.

Miss Clary charged that "many weeks of careful work with the individual child or adult is undone in the court room and, in some instances, completely shattered by the punitive manner in which the indvidual is treated. Inasmuch as the professional staff's responsibility is to the clients coming to the court, this continual frustration in carrying out the work in the courtroom, added to the chaotic administrative methods makes for very serious personnel problems and has wrecked the high morale which has characterized the social service department, notwithstanding the many serious handicaps the Juvenile Court had experienced during the past several years."

Administrative Differences

Asked whether there were indications of "chaotic morale" in the court, Judge Cockrill replied, "Yes, I think this whole thing has been coming about for some time due to the administrative differences between Miss Clary and me."

Asked whether it was her policy to require social workers to wait outside the courtroom on days they had cases scheduled, Judge Cockrill said that no such order was ever issued.

She said, in fact, that she had been working with Miss Clary and Miss Fagrie on a plan so social workers could "spend less time" outside the courtroom. She said the plan was advanced at the request of the two resigning court officials.

Asked about general court problems, Judge Cockrill told reporters, "If you want to go to members of the Board of Public Welfare who have cases over here, I think you might get some insight into it."

Vetoed Survey Plan

Judge Cockrill said she vetoed a plan advanced earlier this year by the Advisory Committee to the Juvenile Court for a recreation survey of an area in the city. She said she took this action because one supervisor and one probation officer from the court would be members of the subcommittee undertaking the survey.

She said she wanted the court to cooperate fully in giving pertinent information on the necessity for recreation in the area of the proposed survey, but she felt such a survey was a Recreation Department project in which the Advisory Committee should cooperate, rather than a project the committee should undertake itself.

Queried on her policy of committing youthful offenders, Judge Cockrill said: "I don't know whether the commitments are higher or lower. I have dealt with individual cases as they have come to the court.

"Regardless of what the figures show numerically," she said, "there are a number of factors that might enter into the situation."

Commitments Asked

One of these, she pointed out, was the number of cases sent to the Juvenile Court by the Board of Public Welfare with a recommendation that the youth be committed to the National Training School. These were cases which the board already had tried to help without commitment.

Judge Cockrill said that, based on what she believes "sound observation in the courtroom, "there appears to be a greater number of 16-and-17-year-old boys, the majority of them second offenders, coming before the court."

She said the larger number might be due to the fact the boys quit school when at 16, and that employment is more difficult. "They are more likely to get into difficulty," she said.

She pointed out that older boys are more difficult to deal with on probation. She said she considered National Training School an "opportunity to rehabilitate" youths. On a question of commitment to National Training School or Industrial Home School (a Board of Public Welfare institution), Judge Cockrill said each case was decided on the basis of what appeared best in each circumstance.

School Lacks Facilities

She said that as a general proposition the Industrial Home School does not have the facilities to deal with older boys.

Asked if she had sent any petty offenders to National Training School, she replied, "I don't recall any."

Asked whether she planned to go ahead with the administration of the court as she has been, Judge Cockrill replied:

"Yes, because I have done in my judgment the best thing for me to do."

Resignations Revealed

First public intimation of the discord at Juvenile Court came last Thursday, when The Washington Post reported Miss Clary, who had held her post eight years, and Miss Fagrie had resigned, effective June 30.

At that time it was stated the resignations stemmed partly from differences of opinion of the handling of juvenile offenders. Social workers were reported as believing Judge Cockrill was too severe in her sentencing.

Judge Cockrill said then that it was not "factual" to say that the resignations were brought about by differences of opinion.

On the following day the three principals in the dispute issued a joint statement admitting "differences of convictions" which involved "administration and policy."

Since that time, it has been revealed that in the nine months' period following Judge Cockrill's appointment last July, 106 boys were sent to the National Training School for Boys until they reach 21. During the preceding 12 months, only 90 boys were committed by the court. At the beginning of May, District youths in the National Training School were at a four-and-a-half year peak in number.

Dirksen Named Sesqui Drama Music Chief

Richard Dirksen, associate organist and choir master of Washington Cathedral, has been named musical director for the Sesquicentennial drama, "Faith of Our Fathers," opening at the new Rock Creek amphitheater in early July.

Dirksen

The new director, only 29, also will compose the overture and symphonic score for the Paul Green production, the Sesqui Commission announced yesterday.

Dirksen attended George Washington and Johns Hopkins Universities and studied organ at Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore.

In the past year he was professor of organ at American University and directed the Department of Agriculture chorus. He lives at 3022 Wisconsin ave. nw.

Meanwhile, sale of tickets to the Sesqui symphouy concerts at the Watergate was postponed yesterday because the tickets had not arrived from the printers. National Symphony officials said they did not know when the tickets would be available.

Sutton Sponsors Bill For Sesqui Refund

Representative Pat Sutton (D., Tenn.) yesterday introduced a bill to return to the Federal Treasury all the unspent and unobligated funds of the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission.

The measure was sent to the House Administration Committee. The commission voted finally last week not to have the Freedom Fair, previously planned as a main feature of the Sesquicentennial Celebration. Representative Gordon Canfield (R., N. J.) has made demands like Sutton's for returning unspent Sesqui funds to the Treasury.

Look at the FUN you're missing!

SURE, we know—a car is a "necessity" these days. A modern family "couldn't get along without one." Or so you tell yourself.

Come, come, sir! We know, and so do you, the real reason you got the new-car fever —and the kind of car you are hankering for.

You want a car with some fun in it, don't you?

A car you'll get a big bang out of every time you see it parked in front of your house—every time you slip into its front seat—every sweet and easy mile you travel in it.

Well, come see what this beauty does for you.

How the doors swing open in warm welcome at a thumb touch on a button. How the broad seats invite you to take it easy. How the big straight-eight under the bonnet snaps into purring life at your toe-touch.

And then note—

FOUR-WAY FOREFRONT. This rugged front end (1) sets the style note, (2) saves on repair costs—vertical bars are individually replaceable, (3) avoids "locking horns," (4) makes parking and garaging easier.

How smoothly you slip away from the curb—especially when Dynaflow* is handling the power transmission.

How firm and steady the whole car feels. How it holds on curves, free of "heel-over" and sway. How each coil-sprung wheel quicksteps over bumps and rough spots that mean jounce and jiggle on most cars—how buoyantly road-free a Buick is.

Fun? You bet it's fun—too much fun to miss.

And there's no reason to miss it, really, for this strapping traveler is priced under many sixes. Starts at figures just an easy step above the so-called Lowest Price cars.

'Watchdog' Group Urged To Aid Law Enforcement

Judicial Conference Told Independent Agency Could Lift Legal Standards

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

A permanent body should be formed to keep close watch on law enforcement in Washington, the Judicial Conference for the District of Columbia Circuit was told yesterday.

The suggestion was made by John L. Laskey, president of the District Bar Association. He told a meeting of judges, lawyers and guests that a "law-enforcement" conference would, by its mere presence, cause law enforcement officers to raise their standards.

Laskey was one of four persons who delivered papers before the session, held in the United States Court of Appeals with more than 70 persons present. The meeting is an annual affair.

"I feel that there is a need for a conference on law enforcement organized on a permanent self-perpetuating basis, independent of any agency dealing with law enforcement but made up of representatives of each court, agency, bureau or office dealing with any of the phases of law enforcement, plus a broad public representation," said Laskey.

Bar Group Studies It

He said that the bar association was now studying the formation of such a unit, which was suggested during the recent House District Subcommittee probe of crime here. Laskey said it would be inadvisable to have the conference under sponsorship of the Congress committee.

He pointed out that Washington has a complex form of law enforcement which needed constant liaison and coordination.

Things that the suggested law-enforcement unit could well consider at this time were listed as follows by Laskey:

1. Establishment of a central crime detection laboratory.
2. Training of policemen in legal methods by which evidence can be gathered.
3. Prompted disposition of court cases without inconveniencing witnesses unduly.
4. Delays in the executions of persons convicted of capital crimes.

Policy Need Cited

But most important, he said, would be the formation of an "over-all" policy in handling cases. Also, the conference should be free to criticize defects wherever found—and that includes the judicial system, he said.

He recalled differences of opinion between prosecutors and judges as to disposition of cases.

"Agreement in advance on the policy to govern in such matters would eliminate wasted effort and frustration. The public certainly has a very substantial interest in efficient law enforcement and should have a place where not only they could be represented, but where their individual views, as lay persons, could be made known. In many instances these views could offer a fresh approach leading to the solution of vexing problems," he said.

In another address, Mrs. Ruth McCormick Miller, editor of the Washington Times-Herald, told the meeting that the "involved executive government directive" has taken the place of the ancient "royal decree" and has become a threat to the American philosophy of government.

She urged the lawyers to join the fight to see that the constitutional form of government prevails.

Other addresses were given by James E. Palmer, jr., of the Federal Bar Association, who spoke on a "Uniform Code of Ethics for Federal Courts" and James C. Wilkes, of the District Bar Association, who spoke on "Judicial Review of Action of Administrative Agencies of the District of Columbia."

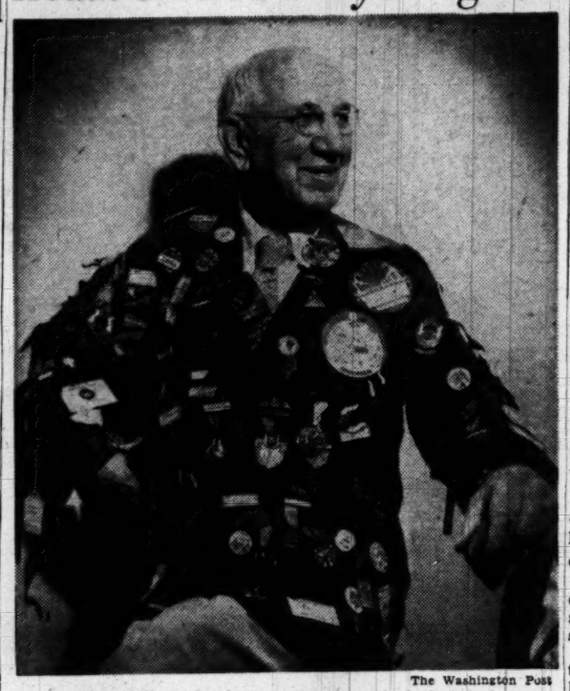
81-Year-Old Jack-of-All Things Heads Grotto Parley Vanguard



The Washington Post

Prophet William Snyder with his medal-bedecked jacket

An 81-year-old man with a red coat covered with convention medals is among early arrivals for the Grotto convention starting Wednesday at the Hotel Statler.

He is William H. Snyder, of Elmira, N. Y., and Cocoanut Grove, Miami Fla., and the coat typifies his gregarious instincts.

"Bill," as he likes to be called, is a member of more organizations than you can shake a stick at, proverbially speaking.

He has a calling card that lists them and his titles: Director of Elmira War Chest, 1918-19; Past Sachem of Wanneta Tribe, Independent Order of Red Men, at Elmira Club; member, Miami Rotary Club and a founder of the Elmira club; member, Miami Beach Rod and Reel Club; a founder of the Elmira Masonic Club; founder and honorary commodore of the Watkins Glen (N. Y.) Yacht Club, and many others.

Bill is also the founder of the Ancient Order of Flat Tires and Big Blow Out (president) of Puncture No. 1 (Elmira) and Puncture No. 2 (Miami), and the author of numerous parodies, such as one to the tune of "Sweet Adeline," beginning: "'Flat Tire' of mine, 'Flat Tire' of mine, To-night, dear 'Flat,' my heart is thine."

Bill has been a "prophet" for 46 years, and this will be the third national convention of Grottoes he has attended in Washington—the others were 1911 and 1917.

In the vanguard of the some 12,000 prophets expected for the four-day convention yesterday were delegates of Grottoes in Long Beach, Santa Ana and Lynwood, Calif. They made a visit to the George Washington National Masonic Memorial, in Alexandria, where the Grotto archives room will be dedicated at 2:30 p. m. Friday.

Man Indicted In BB Firing On Boy, 9

Transfer Company Employe Denies Shooting of May 1

A 22-year-old transfer company employe yesterday was indicted by the District grand jury on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon in the BB gun shooting of a 9-year-old boy.

The employe is Warren E. Deal of 333 5th st. se. The victim, Leroy Watkins, 9, of 819 26th st. nw., may lose the sight of his left eye as a result of the shot, according to police.

Police said the boy was playing in the alley in the rear of the Smith Transfer Corp. of Staunton, Va., at 2515 H st. nw., where Deal was an employe, when he was shot in the eye May 1. Deal has denied firing the air rifle, they said.

Also named in the 28 indictments returned yesterday by the District grand jury were:

Robert F. McCall, 27, of 4538 Eads st. ne., charged with second degree murder in the death of Frank Fenwick, 52, of 224 Parker st. ne. Police said Fenwick was beaten and kicked to death April 29 during an argument in his home.

Mrs. Lucille Savage, 29, of 412½ M st. nw., charged with committing perjury during the trial of three youths on robbery charges December 19. Mrs. Savage, the complaining witness, denied she ever had been arrested on a petit larceny charge or that she had been known as Lucille Holmes, or Trdon, or Fulton, all of which was false, the grand jury charges. Because of her testimony at the trial, the charges were dimissed against the three youths.

Lee Sizemore, 42, of Baltimore, charged with housebreaking. Police said he was arrested May 5 in the basement of the Calvary Methodist Church, 1463 Columbia rd. nw.

Thomas A. Sweeney, 19, of 3146 Dumbarton ave. nw., charged with assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge on a 13-year-old friend of his sister April 24.

The following persons were indicted on charges of operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips: Robert L. Simpson, 36, of 408 New York ave. nw.; Robert Roberson, 37, of 634 N st. nw., and Leroy Tollliver, 62, of 1111 3d st. southeast.

Plasterer Dies In 3-Story Fall From Scaffold

District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday certified as accidental the death of a plasterer killed in a three-story fall from a scaffold.

The workman, William D. Kelly, 65, 2007 North Courthouse rd., Arlington, was pronounced dead at the scene yesterday after he fell on a construction job at 3311 M st. nw.

Police were informed that Kelly was seen to lean forward as if in pain a few seconds before the fall. Dr. MacDonald said the man probably had suffered a heart attack. A fractured skull was given as immediate cause of death.

House Votes U. S. Acquire Stone House

Speaker Rayburn yesterday won House approval of the bill for Federal acquisition of the historic Old Stone House at 3051 M st. nw.

The Speaker—who rarely speaks in debate—urged approval of the bill after Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.) had asked that the House defer action. After Rayburn spoke, Miller withdrew his request, although he said he still had reservations.

"I am very much interested in the passage of this bill," Rayburn told the House, "because I think that the few landmarks we have in the United States ought to be preserved as an inspiration to the generations that are coming." He added:

"I do not know what the cost will be. I do not think it will cost a great deal. But a building like this, even though it does cost money, connects the first generation of our freedom and our liberty with the present generation and all the generations that are to come hereafter."

Miller said some members felt "there were certain groups of people who were trying to profit by getting this legislation passed in order to unload something on the Government."

Before passing the bill, the House adopted an amendment proposed by the Public Works committee, of which Miller is a member, fixing a $90,000 limit as the top price that could be paid without further authority from Congress.

The bill now goes to the Senate where a hearing is slated Wednesday. One suggestion for use of the building, if the Government obtains it, is to have it operated as a museum by the Columbia Historical Society.

Man, 36, Held In Slaying Of Cabbie

A coroner's jury yesterday held Julius Evans, 36, of 1605 North Capitol st. nw., for the grand jury in connection with the fatal shooting of a taxicab driver Saturday night, following a traffic argument.

The cabbie, Madison McKay, 29, of 48 DeFrees st. nw. died in Emergency Hospital shortly after he was found lying in the street at 15th and Q sts. nw. A bullet had penetrated his chest.

Police said McKay, Evans and Elbert Williams, a driver of the car in which McKay was riding, argued after Evans was obliged to halt his car for a truck blocking off Williams' auto.

Later, the cars stopped for a traffic light, police said. McKay and Williams got out of their car and approached Evans. Police said Evans drew a pistol and fired at McKay as the latter sought to open the Evans car door.

Police quoted Evans as saying that McKay had drawn a knife. A penknife was found lying about 4 inches from McKay's hand.

Liquor Men Oppose ABC Amendments

Almost Unanimous Opinion Is Voiced Against Discount Advertising Plans

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Spokesmen for Washington's liquor industry voiced almost solid opposition yesterday to two proposed Alcoholic Beverage Control Board regulations.

The proposals, aired at a public hearing before the Commissioners, would:

1. Prohibit liquor stores from advertising "loss leaders"—brands lisited at below-cost prices to draw customers into the store.

2. Forbid wholesalers to grant discounts to retail dealers, presumably in accordance with the size of purchases.

Alan Payne, ABC chairman, told the city heads the proposals would help "stabilize" the liquor industry here, were for the "benefit of the public" and would not mean higher prices.

Some Back Price Bill

While opposing Payne's proposals, several liquor spokesmen approved the so-called voluntary price-fixing bill, now before the House District Committee. The measure would permit contracts under which retailers would agree to sell at prices set by wholesalers. The House group did not consider this measure, as expected, because Representative Harris (D., Ark.) whose subcommittee recently approved the bill, was not present at yesterday's full committee meeting.

Payne has said his two proposals are the ABC's substitute for the pending legislation.

Eight witnesses testified against the proposed liquor regulations, one supported only the advertising ban and one person asked to file a brief at a later date.

June 26 Deadline Set

Opponents won assurance the Commissioners would not act immediately on the proposal when Commissioner John Russell Young told Jerome B. McKee he could have until June 26 to submit the position of the Federation of Business Men's Associations, Inc.

F. Joseph Donohue, speaking for Milton S. Kronheim & Son, Inc., large wholesaler, told the Commissioners:

"I can't conceive that prohibition against discounts will have any result but the increase of prices." He said he agreed with the aims of the ABC controls but said they do not go far enough to "meet the chaos within the industry."

Another witness, Hilliard Schulberg, executive director of the Washington Retail Liquor Dealers Association, advocated a ban against all price advertising, not merely "loss leader" advertising.

"Enforcement Difficulty" Cited

The association's proposal, he explained, would not stop institutional or brand advertising. "All it would eliminate would be the dollars and cents advertising which is the root of the evil, so far as the advertising of alcoholic beverages in the District is concerned," he said.

A halfway ban would be "inadequate, impractical and difficult to enforce," he argued.

Milford F. Schwartz, for the Washington Wholesale Liquor Dealers Association, said a prohibition against large discounts would allow only the "large operator" to put in a large supply when the price of the merchandise had been reduced.

Others opposing the proposed regulations were: Peter Borras, Washington Restaurant Association; Bourbon A. Dawes Washington Hotel Association; Robert F. Wilson, Magruder, Inc. and John Fitzgerald, Forman Brothers, Inc.

Sole ABC proposal backers at yesterday's hearing was J. E. Binderman, representing 18 Value Liquor Stores. He said the purpose of "loss leader" advertisng was to induce customers into the store and then switch them to more expensive brands, thus costing the consumer more in the long run. He reserved judgment on the plan to ban discounts.

Safe and $1000 In Cash Are Stolen In Alexandria

A safe containing more than $1000 in cash, and merchandise valued at "several hundred dollars," was stolen early yesterday from the Mount Vernon Pharmacy, 1515 Mount Vernon ave., Alexandria.

Police said the theft was discovered at 7:40 a. m. by an unidentified passerby who noticed the front door of the store was open and notified police. The thieves apparently had jimmied the front door and then wheeled the safe out the rear door and down a ramp to a waiting car, according to Detective Inspector Russell A. Hawes.

Charles Gerstein, owner of the pharmacy, said the safe contained his own money and about $200 belonging to the proprietor of a neighboring store. Merchandise, including wrist watches and fountain pens, was taken from display shelves in the store.

'Hemolytic Anemias'

Dr. William Dameshek of Tufts Medical College, Boston, will discuss "Modern Concepts of the Hemolytic Anemias" at 8:30 p. m. today in the recreation hall of Mount Alto Hospital, 2650 Wisconsin ave. nw.

Archbishop O'Boyle Presents Diplomas To 111 at Trinity

By Martha Hall
Post Reporter

College graduates today are faced with a greater responsibility than ever before, Vice President Alben W. Barkley declared yesterday.

The Veep spoke at commencement exercises of Chevy Chase Junior College at the Chevy Chase Methodist Church. He presented diplomas to 45 girl graduates.

Barkley stressed the need for educated leadership in the world and said educated people must spread their knowledge widely for the benefit of mankind.

The world today, he said, is divided between two ideologies. In one, the individuals are "mere pawns to be sacrificed to the juggernaut of totalitarianism." Under the other, democracy, all struggles have been for the freedom and liberty which have made the United States the "richest, freest and now the strongest" nation in the world.

Another third of the world's population is not under either ideology, and the United States finds itself fighting "not only for the bodies of these men and women but also for their souls," Barkley said.

The service was one of five held yesterday in Greater Washington.

At Trinity College

At Trinity College 111 girls received degrees from the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Catholic Archbishop of Washington, climaxing college's celebration of its 50th anniversary.

The Rev. Eugene M. Burke, a member of the Trinity faculty, told the graduates that only the future can determine whether the tradition of their Catholic liberal arts education will "develop in each of you into a living and dynamic reality.

"The educational process has simply scattered the seeds of learning, knowledge and wisdom in the soil of your minds. Whether or not these seeds will bear fruit or die, whether or not these skills will rust away or be turned to unworthy ends, or be used as they were intended—that is up to you," Father Burke said.

Immaculata Junior College

Twenty-nine students received diplomas at Immaculata Junior College. The Most Rev. John M. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Washington, presented the diplomas, and the Rev. Paul Hanly Furfey of Catholic University was the speaker.

Today 32 students from Immaculata High School will be graduated. The Very Rev. Msgr. Thomas J. McCarthy of the National Catholic Welfare Conference will speak, and the Rev. Henry Collins, pastor of St. Ann's Church, will preside.

57 Graduate at Madeira

The outdoor theater at Madeira School, Greenway, Va., was the scene of graduation for 57 students yesterday. Dr. Donald Andrews of the physics department at Johns Hopkins University spoke.

Preparatory school graduates of Mount Vernon Seminary heard Charles F. Kettering, vice president of General Motors, speak at their graduation at Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church, Massachusetts and Nebraska aves. nw.

Dr. Henry J. Carman, dean of Columbia College, will speak at graduation exercises for Mount Vernon Junior College at 11 a. m. today at the church.

Student Nurses Get Diplomas

Twenty-three student nurses received their diplomas from the Very Rev. Hunter Guthrie, president of Georgetown University, at Gaston Hall yesterday afternoon. Miss Therese M. Gresko of Cleveland, Ohio, and Miss Dorothy Anne Quinn of Wilmington, Del., were presented with the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin Award for their outstanding sodality activities.

Today at 10:30 a. m. students of the National Cathedral School for Girls will be graduated in the Washington Cathedral at which the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, will speak.

The Cub Scouts of Den 9 Go All Out in Ideal Father Contest

The Cub Scouts of Den 9, Atlantic Gardens, abandoned their signal drills Monday for a special project.

"Den Dad" Lieut. Comdr. Harold R. Willis, sr., of 4216 4th st. se., speeded-up recitation of Scout creed and left the future Tenderfeet to work in silence on something they wanted to do.

In yesterday's mail, 10 lightweight blue envelopes distinguished only by the variety of penmanship, showed up at the desk of the Washington Post's Ideal Father editor.

Cub Scout Tommy Lamkin, 10, of 4214 4th st. se.:

"My dad is the best in the world because he always takes me places like the movies and the circus . . . He lets me go any place that I want, just so that he knows where I go."

Cub Scout Robert Baker, 8, of 719 Atlantic st. se.:

"My father is a nice father because he is very nice, because he give me things that I don't expect, but I like him very much . . . He is the veary, veary best father in the world."

Cub Scout Paul Shegogue, 9, of 313 Livingston st. se.:

". . . He helps me find out how to do my numbers and helps bring the food home from the store, and he bought us our television. He sometimes takes me to Marshall Hall to ride the horse and to the circus."

Eight-year-old Harold Willis, son of Cub Master Willis, wrote with one eye on his active dad:

"He is so sweet and kind . . . He takes me to air shows . . . he helps me in my work . . . he helps me wash dishes . . . every time I get twenty 100's in arithmetic and spelling he takes me out."

Signing his entry, "Your Cub Dennis," Dennis Frazier, 8, of 4208 4th st. se., reported: "I think my father is the best because he takes time out to take me fishing . . . he gave me a dollar for fishing hooks . . ."

Three "junior" scouts, Sidney Knock, 8, 4329 4th st. se.; Larry Solomon, 9, 4216 4th st. se., and Walter Pilcher, 8, of 4218 4th st. se., were equally sure that their dads would be the winners. If they are, and good luck to them all, the family will be spending a pleasant Father's Day June 18, at dinner, show and movie. Other surprises, like hints of TV, are cookin'. . .

Contest ends Friday, June 9, at midnight. Hurry, Hurry, Hurry!

18 Groups Enter Pleas For School Betterments

Special Meeting Of Board Hears Calls for Items In 1952 Budget

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

The southeast area beyond the Anacostia River needs at least two new elementary schools, two junior high schools and a senior high school, the Board of Education was told last night.

Citizens of the section cited overcrowded schools, part-time instruction and the continuing growth of apartment developments in Congress Heights and Washington Highlands in presenting requests for new buildings.

The southeast residents appeared before the board at a special meeting called to hear the recommendations of citizens' groups for 1952 school budget requests. Representatives of 18 organizations spoke at the meeting, held in the Thomson School.

Three Members There

The meeting was attended by only three members of the nine-man school board. Present were Board President C. Melvin Sharpe, Vice President James A. Gannon and Mrs. Velma G. Williams.

The southeast section was represented by five speakers. The requests presented by each differed but they added up to two new white elementary schools, both a white and a Negro junior high school, and a Negro senior high school.

Space Inadequate

Joseph A. Quander, secretary of the Southeast Parents Committee, said that present and planned white elementary school facilities will provide space for only 2800 students, while a survey of the area shows there will be more than 6000 school age children by 1953.

In requesting schools for Negroes Quander said that 700 negro junior high school students in the southeast are attending classes in an elementary building or "traveling great distances into the center of town" to go to school.

Mrs. Dorothy R. Reese, president of the Congress Heights Parent-Teacher Association, urged the board to give consideration to a new white senior high school that will be needed in the area when the present group of elementary and junior high school students reach high school.

Urged by Others

Others who urged a school building program for the southeast were Mrs. Lillian R. Millman, chairman of the school committee of the Southeast Progressive Party, and Charles Price, of the Washington Highlands Citizens Association.

Homer Baker of the Ft. Davis Citizens Association presented a petition urging the school board to acquire land in the Ft. Davis area for a new elementary school.

Dr. David M. Delo of the Cerebral Palsy Association told board members the District public school system is providing education for only a fraction of the city's handicapped children.

Speaking for "all the schools in the Georgetown area," Sturgis Warner of the Georgetown Progressive Citizens Association asked for an additional play area at the Hyde and Jackson schools, playground equipment for the Phillips, Wormley and Corcoran schools; replacement of splintered flooring and new plumbing at all of the schools, and the enclosure of open stairways.

D. C. Leaders Called To Dairy Hearing

The milk issue has forced a quick change in the role of Commissioner John Russell Young.

Last Thursday he was presiding officer in a meeting where the Commissioners heard various persons, including two Congressmen, discuss the District Government plan to end imports of "emergency milk" June 30.

Next Thursday Commissioner Young will be first on a list of District officials summoned by Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa) to a hearing on various problems affecting the dairy industry, including barriers to interstate movement of milk.

The Commissioners several months ago decided not to extend after June 30 their emergency provision for importation of milk from beyond the Maryland and Virginia area where dairies supplying the District are subject to inspection by the District Health Department. The Commissioners have taken under advisement the question of further extension of the emergency imports asked by hotel and restaurant groups and by two dairies.

In last week's meeting Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), who represents the Virginia part of Greater Washington, teamed up with the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association to end the mport of "emergency" milk June 30.

Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.), whose district includes Montgomery County, also asked the Commissioners to be cautious about relaxing milk standards.

Senator Gillette announced that Thursday's hearing will begin at 10 a. m. It will be in room 324 of the Senate Office Building.

Gillette said the hearing Thursday will be the first of an extensive inquiry into the milk and dairy industry.

He said the first hearing will be on the "proposed local restrictions on interstate movement of milk."

Other District officials called to the Thursday hearing with Commissioner Young are Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger, and Walter W. Burdette, director of food inspection.

Bank Posting Bill Indorsed By D. C. Unit

The House District Committee yesterday approved a bill to give banks and trust companies here the benefit of a deferred posting law.

It would permit posting checks in the banks' books the day after they are presented for payment, and provide 24 hours leeway beyond the time limit that now applies for returning checks not covered by adequate balances.

The measure was requested by the District Bankers' Association and is supported by the American Bankers' Association. Similar laws have been enacted in 42 States.

Seven Members Attend

Committee approval was voted in a morning executive session, attended by 7 of the 25-member committee.

Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) announced his bill for fixing liquor prices under a voluntary fair trade program here had been deferred because Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.) was not present to report the measure to the full committee.

Business Upturn Obituaries Seen As Premature

Business recessions begin while overall economic activity still is expanding, according to a report issued by the National Bureau of Economic Research.

Also recoveries get under way while business as a whole still is ntracting, said the report titled "New Facts on Business Cycles."

The study is by Arthur F. Burns, director of research for the pivately suported bureau which sells its services to business groups, labor unions and educational institutions.

When a downturn in general business occurs, Burns said, the shift usually is shown firs' in investment orders, later in production, and a little later still in income payments.

Burns added, however:

"For the present, obituaries on the business cycle are romantic expressions of human impatience, not records of solid achievement."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man Who Was Persistent Worshipful Suitor, Never Looking At Other Women, Now Flirts Habitually In Wife's Presence; Why Is It?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What is wrong with my husband, that he flirts habitually with other women in my presence? I turn to ice after an evening out with him during which he compliments the other man's wife and gives her attentions that rightfully should be mine. I feel his actions are an insult to me.

He has been worse about this since he came home from the Army and he doesn't remember me on special days as he once did. When we make friends with any other couple, it is only a matter of time until he makes a pass at the wife. It is all done in a joking way, but after 12 years' marriage I am pretty fed up.

During our courtship he showered me with attentions and was very persistent, and never looked at another woman. But after the knot was tied he did an about-face and now it seems that flirtations are all he lives for.

How Cruel Can a Husband Be?

HE HASN'T been unfaithful so far as I know, unless perhaps in thought. Actually he told me a few years ago that he could go for a certain matron if he weren't married to me. How cruel can a husband be? We still see the couple, he still flirts with the wife and I am constantly tormented by memories of that statement.

John gives me everything I want materially, but the lack of honest affection and real consideration in his attitude towards me makes me wonder if our marriage will last through the years. I gave up a career to marry him, we have two fine children and I have kept my looks. I am slender and pretty, more than can be said for most of his crushes.

Hasn't he grown up emotionally or is the fault with me? Could it be that I am not affectionate enough? I am not an affectionate person and I find it hard to show my feelings. I blame my unhappy childhood for this. If you can make sense of my letter, please tell me whether I need psychiatric help, or if John does. Or maybe we both are emotionally ill. L. F.

Each Wants Help Other Can't Give

DEAR L. F.: It seems to me that both you and John suffer from exceedingly low self-esteem, and I believe this is the crux of your mutual difficulty. I think it explains why John was an anxiously worshipful suitor, why you preferred and responded to that brand of courtship, and why the resultant marriage is rife with conflict and chill disappointment felt by both.

If you had grown up with a comfortable estimate of your worth, in the sense of generally feeling intrinsically lovable, or significantly dear to a circle of intimates who accepted you without reservations, then you would be spontaneously affectionate, neither fearful nor awkward in dealing with sentiment. And if such were your disposition, you would be better able to help your husband overcome his misgivings about himself.

The fact that John never looked at other women before marriage, then gradually became a promiscuous flirt, playing the gallant before your eyes and manifesting indifference to your wounds, suggests that he feels profoundly uncertain of his ability to be a good sex partner, which he assumes to be the core of pleasing conjugal behavior. And he employs flirtations as a means of "reassuring" himself, and you, that he is really quite a fellow—if only he could settle down emotionally to one woman, he implies.

Man Signifies Discouragement

IT SEEMS probable that your special needs of ego inflation, doubtless expressed in demanding ways, plus your characteristic difficulty in showing affection, unfortunately changed John's initial anxiety about his manhood into deep discouragement,—so that to save face with himself, he began to test his appeal for other women. And maybe also he finds some consolation in thus defying your dictator theory that his whole attention "rightfully should be" centered on you, especially in company.

However, in closing, perhaps I should tuck in the possibility that John could be more at fault than you, in the sense that he may be morbidly afraid of full surrender to mate love, hence plays the field, as some men do, to keep his affections diluted in neurotic self-defense. Whatever the inside story, psychiatric help for either partner would be a starting point towards improving the sick relationship. And to give you a line on conjugal health, I strongly recommend Dr. Rudolf Dreikurs' wise affectionate book, "The Challenge of Marriage" (Duell, Sloan & Pearce). M. H.

Search for Joy

Some like the rolling countryside . . . And some the city street . . . While others want the sea to be . . . Their comfortable retreat . . . And many of them will defend . . . In no uncertain voice . . . The fullness of their pleasure and . . . The wisdom of their choice . . . The majesty of mountain peaks . . . The beauty of a sail . . . The brilliance of a boulevard . . . The friendship of a trail . . . And some may find their little world . . . Is everything it seems . . . And some may have to be content . . . To travel in their dreams . . . But whether wishful or in fact . . . At home or far apart . . . The only real and lasting joy . . . Is happiness of heart.

Executive Aid in Lawmaking Urged

THE executive branch of the Government should be "on tap, not on top" in relation to the legislative branch, according to Roger W. Jones, assistant director of the Bureau of the Budget.

However in a talk yesterday at the Woman's National Democratic Club, Mr. Jones, who is in charge of legislative reference for the bureau, made a strong plea for the participation of the executive branch in legislation.

Recommending that the executive departments, which have to deal with the administration of legislative programs, help write legislation which Congress can then accept or reject, Mr. Jones said that such a method by no means reduces Congress' authority to a veto power.

Since Government now actually reaches into our daily lives and may do so still more with such plans as public health and Federal aid to education, Mr. Jones said that the ability to make immediate adjustments is important.

"It may take three, four or five years before a problem which is known to one section of the country, impresses itself sufficiently upon the whole Congress to get a law passed. The executive departments might easily clear up the problem in the meantime," he said.

Except for a few new trail-blazing pieces of legislation in which Congress wants to define broad social purposes, laws must now be greatly detailed, Mr. Jones said. For this reason, he said, it is important for the executive departments to be in consultation with Congress when complex legislation is being drawn up.

He added that he did not think that it would improve our laws any for Congress to have its own staffs to gather information and study these problems. For the legislative branch to duplicate the work of the Labor Department's Bureau of Statistics, for example, would serve no useful purpose, he said.

Mr. Jones was introduced by Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, a vice president of the club. Guests at the head table with Mr. Jones, Mrs. Brannan and the president of the club, Mrs. Fred Morrison, were Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Elmer Staats, Mrs. Paul Ken, Mrs. Frank S. Revell, Mrs. Leona K. Knight and Mrs. Elmer L. Kaiser.

Next Monday's speaker at the club will be Senator John J. Sparkman whose subject will be "Housing." On June 16, a tea will be held to honor Mrs. India Edwards, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Pine Chairs Can Age Gracefully —And in a Hurry, Too—If These Instructions Are Carefully Followed

GIVING the "old look" to some pine chairs is the problem of a reader who has two she would like to refinish in the early American manner. Here is her letter:

DEAR ANNE:
I have two kitchen-type chairs (but a nicer type, really) which I plan to use for my dinette. These chairs are pine and a bit scarred and banged up. I plan to sand off the old finish and, in refinishing, get the effect of Early American pine—mellow and rustic. What would I use to get the desired effect?
Sylvia Knight,
4907 Deal Drive, Washington

I have heard that the old-time refinishers used a penetrating red paint on pine to give it a richer look. Not knowing how they went about this, I called wood working instructor Joseph Honeychuck at Central High School.

He thinks a much more practical plan for you would be to use a tiny bit of red mahogany stain in a varnish finish. This stain goes a long way in clear varnish, he warns, so add it cautiously, testing to see if you achieved the desired tone as you go along.

You should use at least two coats of varnish, he says. Let the first dry very thoroughly, then sand lightly with fine sandpaper fastened around a block of wood. Dip sandpaper in soap and water solution occasionally as you go along to facilitate the rubbing. When sanded, wipe off well, drying thoroughly. Then apply a second coat of varnish, let dry and sand in same manner.

DEAR ANNE:
Can you give me a good recipe for cheese cake? Mrs. Eugene Pick,
4801 Connecticut ave., Washington

This recipe makes a rich, yellow cheese cake that is delicious. It is credited by America's Cookbook (Scribners) to Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt.

Lunt-Fontanne Cheese Cake

½ cup butter, softened
1 package (6 ounces) zweiback, crushed
½ cup powdered sugar
4 eggs, beaten
1 cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons grated lemon rind
3 tablespoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 cup heavy cream
1 pound (2 cups) cottage cheese
¼ cup filour

Spread butter in bottom of 8-inch or 1½-quart spring mold. Add mixture of ½ of crushed zweiback and powdered sugar, and press down or pack well. To well-beaten eggs, beat in granulated sugar, salt, lemon rind and juice and vanilla. Stir in cream and mixture of cheese and flour. Force through fine sieve and beat well. Turn into prepared mold and sprinkle remaining crushed zweiback over top. Bake in very slow oven (250 degrees Fahrenheit) for 1 hour. Then turn off heat and leave cake 1 hour longer in oven. This recipe makes 1 8-inch cake or 6 to 8 portions.

PETUNIA!

It used to be festive
And pretty and pert,
But now there's a crease
Where I lengthened the skirt.

If steaming and pressing don't help, Petunia, and if it's a dirndl type dress, sew several rows of bright braid around the bottom. It will cover that crease completely.

Bishop-Bracken

DEAR ANNE:
Can you give me directions for washing wool blankets in my automatic washing machine? Can I use a detergent on them, or will it remove too much of the natural oils from the wool?
L. B., Washington.

I have talked to the home service director of the appliance company distributing your make of washer here and she tells me the following is the approved routine:

The washing cycle is cut down in the case of blankets so that only 9 or 10 minute is required for the whole job. This is sufficient, she says, and longer washing, rinsing and tumble drying can mat the wool and not leave the blankets as soft and fluffy as you'd like them. Wash 2 to 3 minutes (after all water has run in). Rinses should be 2 to 3 minutes each, too, and the tumbling 2 to 3 minutes.

It's just as well not to rinse too thoroughly, she points out, as some soap left in makes up for oil removed by washing. Improved detergent products are being used satisfactorily for blanket washing, however, she says, particularly a preparation combining a detergent and a water softener. If you'd like any further advice from her or an instruction booklet, telephone Lincoln 79000, Extension 35.

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408. The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

Red Cross Wants Instructors

Additional Red Cross volunteer instructors to teach jewelry-making to patients at Walter Reed General Hospital are being recruited now by the District Red Cross Arts and Skills Service.

Classes will begin June 12 for a 10-day intensive training period, Mrs. Bruce H. Roberts, chairman, District Red Cross Arts and Skills Service, announced.

"We need several volunteers who have had previous art training, or experience with precision tools. After completing the Red Cross instruction, they are asked to pledge one day a week, teaching jewelry-making to patients at Walter Reed or at the Forest Glen Section," she said.

Red Cross Arts and Skills members who have done some jewelry-making are offered advance training. Enrollment will be taken through June 9. Further information may be obtained by telephoning Republic 8300, Extension 762.

Summer Hits 'Y' Education Curriculum

The education department at the YWCA has taken on a summery air. New classes in canasta are being geared so that students may learn how to play in four lessons—just in time to enjoy the game with their companions at a summer resort. The canasta lessons, taught by Mrs. Hannah Gaither Hill, will be given during the month of June in two-hour sessions, Tuesday evenings at 7 p. m.

Mme. Irene Beran's lessons in European cooking will emphasize cool summer menus and recipes for outdoor entertaining. The summer course, which does not included demonstrations, will include instructions in making smorgasbord, hors d'oevres, aspics, etc., and will explain the use of herbs, wines and spices. Classes will be held Thursdays at 7:30 p. m. and Wednesday mornings at 10.

M. Bruno Beran's course in portrait painting will be conducted outside in the park, Wednesday mornings at 10.

A special speed-reading course, designed to increase reading speed from 250 words a minute to as many as 600 words a minute, will be offered especially for students and teachers who are between regular sessions.

The course, under the guidance of Mrs. Rosemary Plumb, makes use of films prepared by Harvard University, diagnostic tests and remedial exercises. Classes are held Wednesdays from 7 to 9 p. m. and will include eight lessons.

Fans have been installed to cool all of the classrooms. Registration is now open and will continue through this week for all courses other than those offered on Thursdays. Thursday courses started last week but late registrations are permitted. For further information on the registrations and the courses, call Metropolitan 2100, ext. 29, or inquire at the YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw.

Other courses being offered during the summer are in water colors, oils, photography, ceramics, handcraft, typing, shorthand, interior decoration, flower arrangement, millinery, sewing and the making of lampshades, draperies and slipcovers. Also foreign languages, public speaking, contemporary culture, personality development and professional writing.

Time Marches Back In Two New Films

By Richard L. Coe

BOTH THE WARNER and Keith's will soon be looking backwards and I don't mean with more Westerns.

Keith's soon will be showing a full-length March of Time on "The Golden Twenties." Warner's has just announced that they'll shortly release a collection of clippings that covers the last 50 years.

Both these pictures have required several years of film-gazing by experts. They're gone through millions of footage and feel they've come up with the cream of what the cameras have caught.

The Warner feature, which is described as recording "the rise of the United States to world leadership in the past half century," will be narrated by Godfrey, Kaltenborn, Quent Reynolds, Milton Cross, Norman Brokenshire and Clem McCarthy, the man Middleground isn't speaking to. It contains a shot of the young Stalin, as well as such folk as Buffalo Bill (which should please "Annie Get Your Gun's" Metro), Caruso, John Philip Sousa and Lillian Russell, as well as the second McKinley inaugural.

"The Golden Twenties," limiting its horizon, is narrated by Elmer Davis, Red Barber, Allen Prescott, Robert Q. Lewis and Frederick Lewis Allen, whose volume "Only Yesterday" picked up where Mark Sullivan's invaluable series, "Our Times," left off. By limiting its time span, the March of Time issue should manage more flavor, as well as delight those to whom the twenties are only yesterday.

While the managers seem a trifle wary of both these clipping collections, I've an idea they're a solid box-office bet since they're both on the different side and that seems to be one thing the local moviegoers at least are searching for. That AND comidies. And in a forgetful world, the past always has the fringes of comedy.

OPENING OF the Olney downtown box office yesterday found that a surprising number of potential customers have taken advantage of the subscription plan . . . Since this means that customers may reserve the same seats for the summer but must pick each week's seats up in advance that doesn't necessarily mean the house is filled for the summer . . . But the Olney people claim it is the heaviest advance of its history.

THE DORIS W. JONES School of the Dance plans a school recital Saturday morning, June 7, at the Howard Theater.

"BRIGHT LEAF," that Gary Cooper-Lauren Bacall picture about the tobacco lands has hit the tobacco-conscious Eastern Shore . . . St. Mary's Theater in Leonardtown has seen it and this week it's "Tobacco Fair Week" in the county, with Johnny of Philip Morris set to take over the theater, schools and the Patuxent Naval Air Base tomorrow and Thursday.

PETE SMITH, the short subjects tycoon, is a visitor here for an honor from the hand of Secretary of Labor Tobin . . . Pete's varied how-to shorts came, in a sense, from his own experience . . . New York-born, he's been a newsboy, shorthand expert, advertising solicitor and, gosh, a film critic . . . The joke of that one is that the day he was hired, the paper folded . . . But he went over to Billboard and that sent him into the movie world . . . He was a publicity man for Douglas Fairbanks, sr., but when his good friend Joe Farnham died, Pete found his real work . . . Farnham had started what was then new, narrated short subjects, and his posthumous reel on fishing was so successful, Pete took over . . . He's won two Academy Awards and his film on industrial safety, "Wrong Way Butch," is what prompts the recognition from Secretary Tobin.

EAGLE-LION, which last week became affiliated with Film Classics, tried a new financing venture for "The Jackie Robinson Story," which will be next at the Dupont and the Little . . . Vice President William J. Heineman got the idea employes of his company might be interested to go along as partners in the venture and office personnel, managers, actors and salesmen put up their own money to produce the ballplayer's biography . . . It's had fine notices so far and the eagles and the lions are reported pleased with their investment.

IT'S RAVES for New York' Arena Theater in the Edison Hotel, with Lee Tracy in "The Show Off." . . . Funny, an idea that has been swell for Seattle and Dallas should take so long to percolate to Times Square, but now that it's on, it looks like a click . . . The George Kelly comedy runs through the 17th, with Basil Rathbone taking over next as Cassius in "Julius Caesar."

THE M'LEAN Summer Theater reports its staff for the season, which will open Tuesday night, June 20 . . . Director is Elwyn Dearborn, who was a playreader for the Christophers' play contest; he spotted "The Velvet Glove," the winner . . . J. D. Fitz-Hugh will be scenic designer; he's a Barter veteran who's just had a season at Daytona Beach's winter company . . . Barbara Greene will be stage manager; she's a Washingtonian, Smith graduate and has been stage manager for New York's Playwrights' Forum . . . Bob Wylie will handle public relations, a Carnegie Tech graduate who's been acting with Monty Woolley's "The Man Who Came to Dinner."

Community Group Heard In 'Elijah'

By Paul Hume

There are no surprises left in Mendelssohn's "Elijah".

But what do you expect from a masterpiece of choral music that has been sung thousands of times since its first performance little more than a hundred years ago?

Thus when a choral conductor decides to present this famous oratorio, he must, if he is to succeed artistically, find a way of making it real to his singers. Otherwise it will not come alive for any audience.

Warner Lawson directed his Washington Community Chorus in the Elijah last night, in the Metropolitan Baptist Church, to a capacity audience.

And Lawson found a way of making "Elijah" live—both for his singers, and for those who listened. It was the first time this still-young chorus had sung the music. That gave Lawson an advantage in making them believe in the words and music they sang.

It was that quality of honest conviction in the singing of the chorus that contributed the evening's major thrill. It made Mendelssohn's academic style seem convincing.

The chorus began a little slowly, as if the heat of the evening and the difficulty of getting the organ and chorus together were too much for them. But soon the soprano tone began to glow and precision came in words and music.

Lawson conducted with easy authority over music and musicians. He gave the work precisely the right mixture of vigor and affection. Mark Fax did well in reducing the orchestral accompaniment to the limitations of a wooden organ. Being at such a distance from the center of things was a hardship on both him and the solo singers.

These were handsomely led by Katharine Hansel, soprano, who made her duet with baritone a thing of real faith and assurance. Her later air, "Hear Ye, Israel," was as skillful and artistic as we can imagine it.

Louise Parker was an able second to the soprano. As the contralto to whom Mendelssohn gave juicy moments, she sang with art, in a rich voice of power. A real artist, she modulated the power to most affecting quiet sounds.

Edward Matthews, as Elijah, sang with reasonant beauty. He knows both style and voice, and projected a credible image of the great prophet. Chauncey Brown opened some of his lines with floating tone but his voice grew reedy in larger moments. But "Elijah" is a thing of mass effect, with a few solo bits of great worth. It provided another triumph for Washington's Community Chorus.

Police Blame Pranksters for 'Klan' Warning

Arlington County police yesterday attributed to pranksters a "Ku Klux Klan warning" left tacked to the door of an East Falls Church grocery store during the weekend.

The neatly-typed note was found at 8:30 a. m. on the front door of Bobby's Market, 6897 N. Fairfax dr., by the owner, John Bobby. It warned him to close up or sell his business within 30 days under threat of "fatal punishment." There was lipstick writing on the window.

The note was signed by "the 147 members and associates of the K. K. Klan of Falls Church, Va."

Arlington Detective Chief C. Burns Pressley said the note appeared to be the work of pranksters, but emphasized the incident will be "thoroughly investigated." He said he knew of no organized Klan in the area.

Child Saved, Mother Dies In Rescue Bid

Baltimore, June 5 (AP).—A 23-year-old mother died early today of burns she suffered rushing back, her own clothes blazing, to rescue her 4-year-old daughter from their flaming home, unaware that the child already had been saved by the father.

The mother, Mrs. Mildred Bramhall, died of first, second and third-degree burns.

Mrs. Bramhall was in the pantry of their home when the gas water heater exploded Sunday, shooting flames over her and, to a lesser degree, her 17-year-old sister, June Betz.

Her husband, Charles, 28-year-old bus driver, shoved the two out the door and went after their daughter, Sharon, who had run into a bedroom.

In the yard, Miss Betz beat the flames from her clothing and started to smother Mrs. Bramhall's burning clothing. But the mother broke loose and ran back into the house after Sharon as her husband was bringing the child out another door.

Neighbors found her lying burned, on the floor of the kitchen.

Pearson Answers Interrogatories In Libel Suit

Columnist Drew Pearson told District Court yesterday that he consulted Alex Campbell, former Assistant Attorney General, before publishing a report that Norman M. Littell was being investigated for "failure to register as a foreign propagandist."

Littel has sued Pearson for libel, asking $300,000, because of the report.

Pearson made the statement as to Campbell in a written answer to interrogatories. In a pretrail action he was ordered to give the source of his infomation by Judge F. Dickinson Letts.

In his answer, Pearson said: "Campbell has now given me permission to reveal his name to the court."

Lines in Protest Against Most Models

Undernourished, overtall,
Ears too big and eyes too small;
Stilted, posey, improbable creatures,
You belong in the funny features.

But, instead, your bony frames
Are adored by weirder dames
Who, through Machiavellian twists,
Get to be known as fashionists.

Please, oh publishers of those slicks,
Give me again some normal chicks.
Give me some dolls with figures right
Before I lose my outraged sight.

—Tom Weatherly.

When Senator Johnson (who threatened to probe Hollywood morals) changed his mind, it was over this deal: The MPPA (Motion Picture Producers Ass'n) promised to "clean its own house."

The first victim is Frank Sinatra. At Jack Benny's party in the Stork Club Sunday night, Hollywood execs tipped off Sinatra that the Eric Johnston office had issued the order

If he is barred from working in films, "just because I went to see a girl in Spain," he will sue the industry for conspiracy.

Headline: "United States Aims to Force German Reforms."
Oh, force-feathers!

An anticelebrity Congressman was belittling the Hollywood and Broadway "names" at the Washington Post's Golf Tournament.

"Disgusting," he sneered. "I never saw so many big heads in Washington before."

"It's a refreshing relief to us," safd an editor, "who are weary of Congressional flat heads."

With Hope, Godfrey, Berle and Sinatra at that tournament it was like old times in Washington. The Capitalists outnumbered the Communists!

To Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Rise Stevens, Rochester, Phil Harris and the others at the Runyon Fund event in Carnegie Hall Sunday night: Thanks for all the Laughs.

And all the Lives.

Phil Harris, who embellished Benny's Carnegie Hall event for the Runyon Fund, played the Short Hills course in Moline, Ill., for the first time the other day. Rated a pretty fair amateur, the star played it 2 under par.

Mrs. Jack Benny, who is a golf expert, was unimpressed, when Jack exclaimed: "Phil just had a 34. That's 2 under par!"

"So what?" Mary so-whatted. "Sam Snead did it, too!"

Item: "Munich, Germany (AP): Henrich Hoffman, the official Nazi Party photographer, was adjudged a major Nazi offender and stripped of his Hitler-awarded title of professor."

We trust he considers himself crushed.

Len Lyons of the newspapers has been circling the globe by air. Only recently back from a flight to Japan (and the Islands), he took off for Paris, London and Rome. "Stretching your luck, eh?" a pal said.

"That's silly," he logic'd. "3 people in Chicago were just burned to ashes in a trolley car."

Time magazine's current issue reports the bullish stock market will continue leaping and go higher and higher. For the past year this reporter has forecast a rising market at a time when financial page experts were gloomy. Our reports were confirmed.

But remember this warning: On June 14, 1948 Time also devoted its front cover and a lengthy article predicting a bull market. Two days after that article appeared the market began to dive and it continued diving for 11 straight months. During those 11 months the Dow, Jones industrial stock price index dropped 32 points.

John Hamilton, Republican chief, has been appointed to defend Harry Gold, charged with turning over atomic secrets to Dr. Fuchs.

John should be good for an Academy Award.

One of the column's friends was in Tokyo last month, where he dined with some Japanese bangers. One startled him with: "We won the war; you lost it!"

"How's that?" he asked.

"We got MacArthur; you got Truman."

Why Actors Gray Young: J. Brooks Atkinson in the N. Y. Times: "'The Show-Off' is not as pithy as it used to be. Some of the things that were satire a quarter of a century ago are no longer so bright and amusing."

From H. Barnes' report in the Herald Tribune: "A fine play of a quarter of a century ago. Retains heart, flavor and humor."

From the N. Y. Trib's book reviews: "It also seems to be a satire on antediluvian ways of thought."

He means it's Old.

From a N. Y. Times review: "It had promising material but it was prolix."

They mean long drawn out.

The Marquess of Milford-Haven, kin to the King of England, jotted some observations about Ameddikins. Of United States columnists, he said their "power is fantastic to a visitor." An individual, he added, could be broken without any means of defense, "except buying a rival newspaper."

Beg pod'n, m'Lord. The cemeteries are crowded with publishers who thought that would help.

Now the Republicans know why FDR was elected four times.

Some of us were gabbing about King Farouk's latest tantrum. "Trouble with him," Freeman Chum declared, "is he's spoiled. Just because he's a king everybody lets him have his way."

"Everybody," chuckled a reporter, "except the Haganah."

Ed Wilcox's definition of Trouble: What happens to a guy who gets tossed out of the State Dept. and becomes a Bookie.

Our St. Louis editor relayed this one. About William Howard Taft's nimble nifty when he was teaching law at Yale.

The class got fidgety and started whispering just before the bell gong'd.

"Just one moment, gentlemen," Taft sarcasm'd, "I have a few more pearls to cast!"

Tips for Vacationists

How Much Do I Need for My Trip . . .

Here's a new angle for vacationists, whether they're taking a trip abroad or traveling and sightseeing at home. These articles, of which this is the second, are condensed from "Your Trip Abroad," just published by Doubleday & Co. The author is president of the Travel Writers' Association and travel editor of Esquire magazine.

By Richard Joseph

CHAPTER TWO

The question most frequently asked of travel agents and travel writers is probably the most difficult of all to answer: "How much do I need for my trip?"

That's like asking "How much will I need to live in Chicago?" The personal factors are so important—what sort of person you are, what tastes and interests you have, how you like to live, how old you are, and so on.

What might be "a quaint little inn" to a college student may very well seem like a miserable hovel to his 50-year-old aunt.

Living costs in terms of dollars vary greatly from country to country. Life, in general, is much cheaper in Mexico or Peru than it is in the United States. In Venezuela, on the other hand, practically everything costs considerably more than it does at home.

Vacation Formula

Here's a simple formula for working out a vacation budget:

After you've chosen your destination, the first thing to do is to decide how much you can spend for your vacation.

Write that figure down on a slip of paper. Subtract from it transportation costs from your home to and from your destination. Subtract also the amount you think you'll want to spend for gifts for your relatives and friends, and for souvenirs of the trip for yourself.

Divide the remainder by the number of days to be spent on your vacation. The figure you have left will be the average amount you can spend for room, meals, sightseeing, entertainment, and incidentals each day while you're on vacation.

As a general rule the minimum on which you can live and travel in most countries runs about $10 a day. You can live, and live quite well, in inns and pensions in any one of a score of countries—Mexico, Argentina, Uruguay, Chile, Peru, Panama, many of the nearby islands of the West Indies, France, England, Italy, Switzerland, and Scandinavia for considerably less than $10 per day.

But when the cost of travel within these countries is included, then the $10-figure must be estimated as an absolute minimum. From that minimum you can go on up to stratospheric figures reading like a maharaja's bar bill at the Savoy in London.

Another generality is that you can live in most places at the same standard as you do at home for just what it costs you at home.

Pay In Advance

Too many travelers who live on a modest scale at home really start spreading themselves when they go abroad. Accustomed to choosing the $1.50 blueplate dinner in a so-so eating place in their home town, they'll go to a truly fine restaurant in Paris or Rome and be shocked when they have to pay $4 or $5 for a really distinguished dinner with excellent wine, or brandy with their coffee.

While it's true that you can get a good steak dinner in Buenos Aires for 50 cents, in most places you can count on paying prices similar to what you'd pay in your home town for meals of comparable excellence.

One of the best ways I know to avoid unpleasant financial surprises in connection with your trip is to make as many arrangements in advance as possible, and to pay for hotels, transportation, sightseeing, and so forth, before you leave home.

That brings us to a discussion of the packaged tour versus the free-lance and footloose type of trip, which takes us into a consideration of the travel agent.

There are approximately 1700 travel agents in business in the United States. These range all the way from huge organizations like the American Express Co. and Thos. Cook & Son, with offices in major cities of the world, to the individual who operates from desk space in your local bank or from a small office off the main street of your home town.

As with any other business some practitioners are better than others. The good ones are the men and women who know the travel business, who have traveled widely themselves. They know what they are talking about, and have valuable personal contacts in all phases of the transportation field.

A good travel agent is the vacationist's best friend, and, fortunately, good travel agents outnumber the inefficient ones plenty to one.

Four Categories

Your vacation outside the United States will come under one of these four general classifications:

1. The "packaged" all-expense escorted tour. This is generally group travel. Advantages of this type of tour include the taking care of all travel details and arrangements for you, inclusion of the main points of interest in the shortest possible time. You get the services of an experienced courier to point out and explain places of interest. You'll be able to budget very precisely, since the price of tour will include everything except tips, beverages, laundry, and purely personal services.

2. The unescorted all-expense tour on a fixed itinerary set up in advance by a tour operator. This is generally taken on an individual rather than a group basis. You sign up for the prearranged tour alone, or with your own party, and travel by yourselves. It provides the same freedom from detail as the escorted trip, but you enjoy a greater freedom of movement, since your comings and goings are not determined by the needs of a group. This type of travel is recommended to vacationists traveling with a few friends, and those allergic to being shepherded about.

3. The tailor-made trip, with itinerary planned to your individual needs and specifications by your local travel agent. This is the type of travel which recommends itself to the more knowing and self-reliant type of vacationist. You're on your own, except for the fact that you plan in advance to be at certain specified points on certain specified dates.

4. The carefree "I'll-go-where-I-please-and-come - back - when-I've-had-enough" type of trip. Unfortunately, this sort of vacation has been so inhibited by the postwar shortages of transportation and hotel space that it can be recommended only to those who have already been in the countries they're going to.

And they should have enough time and money at their disposal to be able to afford to wait awhile if they can't get plane, boat, or train space when they want it.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

'Stud's Place'

Park Likes to Keep People Interesting

—By John Crosby—

"STUDS' Place," a television show on NBC-TV (8:30 p. m., WNBW, Thursdays), is the latest spark to fly out of the brain of Ben Park, a 29-year-old Chicagoan with large ideas. Park has always been fascinated by people being themselves and this is the latest, possibly the ultimate, development in this field.

Park is the man who wrote and produced "Report Uncensored," strictly a Chicago show, back in 1947 and 1948. In this show, he invaded prisons, police stations, reform schools and slums with a wire recorder—now a fairly routine item of equipment—and came back with some pretty startling stuff about Chicago, its crimes and its problems, all recorded from the lips and in he words of the actual participants. The series won a Dupont and later a Peabody award.

Later, his radio program, "It's Your Life," took up medical problems, again in the voices and words of the participants—the patients, the doctors and others. Among other things "It's Your Life" explored symptoms and treatments of tuberculosis, mental disease, cancer, epilepsy and rheumatic fever with such authority and delicacy it won the blessing of the American Medical Association, an extremely difficult thing to do.

Same Idea

WHEN he embraced television, Park, still obsessed with real people and real problems, took his cameras and his recording equipment into people's homes. An immigrant, say, would be interviewed in front of the camera on his life and career. Then, while the cameras still played on him, his wife, his children and his neighbors—off camera—told what the man was really like and how he got that way. This series had a lot of bugs in it; it was too static for television and it was frequently sticky with sentiment; but it was a venturesome idea.

"Studs' Place," probably the most commercial show Park has been mixed up in, is the extension of this same idea into fiction. Studs' Place is a neighborhood hashhouse frequented by a lot of picturesque characters from the nearby blocks. The show has a couple of writers—Doug Johnson and Charlie Andrews, one of Dave Garroway's writers—who outline the situations and tell the cast how these situations will develop.

The actors, who are really playing themselves, make up their own dialogue to fit the situation and to fit their own personalities. This is substantially the way "Kukla, Fran and Ollie" is put together except that "Studs' Place" has a few loose rehearsals, whereas "Kukla, Fran and Ollie" dispenses almost entirely with rehearsal. Most of the actors even use their own names. The proprietor, Studs, is played by Studs Terkel, a veteran radio actor who has a good deal of the manner and charm and authority of a young Spencer Tracy. Phil Lord, a crotchety old-time actor, is played by Phil Lord, a crotchety old-time actor.

Plot Elemental

THEN there is Chet Robles, a jazz pianist, who is played by Chet Robles, a jazz pianist, and Win Stracke, a guitar player and folk singer, who is played by Win Stracke, guitar player and folk singer. About the only regular who doesn't use her own name is Beverly Younger, a veteran radio actress, who plays Grace, the harassed, warm-hearted, sensible waitress in the place. All these actors—I'm just guessing here—were probably selected because they had quite interesting personalities and faces and, at the same time, provided strong contrasts with each other.

These people all sound authentic to me; they are people I could get to care about, which is more than I can say about almost any other regular weekly dramatic show, and all of them are characterized by that common sense that distinguishes almost all TV presentations coming out of Chicago these days. It's not a laugh show but then I'm not at all sure television is a laugh medium.

National Symphony May Add Ukulele Player

Memo to the City Desk:

You might want to put a man on this one and see if you can pin it down:

Howard Mitchell, director of the National Symphony Orchestra, ran into his old friend Arthur Godfrey, ukulele virtuoso, at the National Celebrities Tournament.

They shot the breeze about old times for a while, and then went their separate ways—only to meet again later that night at a party at Eugene Meyer's house.

"Arthur," said Mitch, "after I saw you this afternoon I got an inspiration. During our children's series this fall, we're going to do 'Peter and the Wolf'—and what it needs is Arthur Godfrey as the narrator. How about it?"

"It's a deal," said Godfrey, "I'll do it."

My big ears didn't catch any more, so maybe you'd like to give Mitch and Godfrey a call and get the details.

Bill.

IT'S IN THE CARDS

If it weren't for the atomic bomb, this would probably go down in history as "The Age of Business Machines."

Sorting, classifying and accounting tasks that used to take days are now accomplished in the twinkling of an eye, as thousands of perforated cards whoosh through the uncanny machines.

Two of the most familiar examples of "mechanical bookkeeping" are the paycheck (Government and private) and the magazine renewal card. And the latter has lately blossomed out with a new wrinkle.

Formerly, all you had to do was put a check mark in the proper box, to signify whether you wanted a one-year renewal, or the giant, economy-sized two-year subscription.

Now you don't even have to find a pencil, or make a check mark. At the edge of the card are perforations about the size of a thumbnail, each indicating a different length for the term of your subscription. You tear out the proper perforation; the machines do the rest.

Proficient as they are, it is doubtful whether these robot brains have yet reached their limit of perfection. Some day we will probably have machines that will make it unnecessary for the subscriber to read the magazine at all.

Each issue will be fed into a gadget which will digest the contents and electronically transfer the subject matter to the subscriber's brain.

After that development, only one further step will be possible—an automatic machine that eliminates the subscriber completely. And scientists are currently keeping a close watch on this column, as a possible first step in that direction.

DANNY WOWED 'EM

One of the most popular participants in the National Celebrities Golf Tournament turned out to be Danny Kaye.

Not many baseball fans realized it, but when Danny "described" part of the Nats game on Bob Wolff's television show just before the tournament, it was Danny's first TV appearance.

He says he's going to stay off the little box that talks for at least another year, until he's "ready." But Washington viewers seem to think he's ready right now. His brief appearance resulted in more than 100 enthusiastic telegrams. One fan wired: "Sign up that new announcer. He's terrific."

When Danny was in England, Winston Churchill caught his show and later told Kaye:

"Young man, your control of an audience is terrifying."

Coming from an old audience controller like Winnie, that's praise, mister.

THIS IS WASHINGTON

I doubt if any building anywhere has ever been erected with closer supervision by sidewalk superintendents than the job now going up at 14th and H nw.

Every day you'll see dignified businessmen, women shoppers, errand boys supposedly on rush assignments, young people, old people and all kinds of people standing there watching the construction work.

There's some kind of irresistable attraction about watching a building going up, I guess. But even at that it's strange to see some of our town's busiest executives wasting precious hours at it.

I'll bet some of them have wished that they could get the Chesapeake & Potomac people to put in extension phones for them there, so that they wouldn't have to go to the office at all until the job is completed.

TWIN BILL

Mrs. David Modell of No. 4 8th st. se. reports that a Georgia ave. theater recently offered the double feature:

AS IT SHOULD BE

My remarks about Mr. Barkley's not having kissed a festival queen in ages moved Bernice M. Willey of Lanham, Md., to observe:

The Veep is saving all his kisses

Rail Tank's Water Saves W. Va. Town From Fire Threat

Seth, W. Va., June 5 (AP).—Firemen parlayed a railroad water tank and a hole in the ground to save this southern West Virginia town from possible destruction.

The 18-man Whitesville volunteer fire department, 15 miles away, was called out yesterday when the fire broke out in the business section of this small town. But there were no facilities for fighting fires in Seth.

The firemen dug a hole beneath the spout of the railroad tank. Water that poured from the tank into the hole was pumped out and played on the flames.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Education Aid Move Expected

By Drew Pearson

Slow-spoken Congressman Graham Barden of North Carolina, new chairman of the House Labor and Education Committee, will wait for the right moment and then push his Federal-aid-to-education bill — without aid to parochial schools.

Pearson

Barden, a former school-teacher, is a strong believer in aid to schools, but incurred the wrath of Cardinal Spellman last year when he took a strong stand for continued seperation of church and state.

Since then the late Congressman Lesinski of Michigan was able to bottle the education bill inside his labor and education committee. But with Lesinski's death, however, Barden probably will be able to report the bill out in the form he wants it. But whether he will be able to get it through the House is doubtful.

Meanwhile, here are some of the school conditions existing in parts of the Nation:

In a San Antonio skid row suburb, 3500 children are crowded into two school buildings. Three thousand others do not go to school at all, or attend part-time classes . . . Some schools in northern Virginia are so overcrowded, students are taught in two and three "shifts" per day . . . More than 400,000 children in Oklahoma are schooled in inadequate or unsanitary buildings, including firetraps. At Midwest City, Okla., about 550 children are being taught in a frame firetrap less than 100 yards from an Air Force jet plane runway. If a plane crashed, it is not pleasant to imagine what would happen to children in a building with no outside doors.

Connecticut Friends

Secretary of State Acheson and able Senator Brien McMahon, both from the State of Connecticut, have a peculiar relationship. Neither is too fond of the other, yet McMahon has been one of Acheson's stanchest defenders.

Acheson, who has a peculiar faculty for saying the wrong thing to Senators at the wrong time, was standing in the receiving line of a diplomatic reception, when the Connecticut Senator and his beautiful wife Rosemary approached. As he shook hands, the Secretary of State remarked to his wife:

"Alice, here is an ogre whom I would like to knock over the head, accompanied by the most beautiful woman in Washington."

Acheson smiled when he said it. Nevertheless, the remark was not particularly appreciated.

The personal friction between Acheson and McMahon probably dates back to the days when Acheson's father, the Episcopalian Bishop of Connecticut, refused to perform the marriage ceremony for McMahon's close friend and law associate, Homer Cummings, first Attorney General under Roosevelt. Cummings had been divorced, and Bishop Acheson refused to sanction his second marriage.

More recently, observers have detected a note of resentment around the State Department at the manner in which McMahon has taken the initiative away from Acheson by expounding some A-1 ideas on breaking through the Iron Curtain. Despite personalities, however, McMahon has continued to be one of the best friends of the State Department on Capitol Hill.

Note—McMahon is torn between two advisers—New York Times Correspondent Arthur Krock, who arranged for his historic Truman interview while dining with McMahon, and Columnist Marquis Childs. When the Senator from Connecticut goes liberal, Childs is not averse to claiming credit for it.

Taft's Friend

It never leaked out during Senator Taft's battle against reorganizing the National Labor Relations Board, but NLRB counsel, Robert Denham, who Taft defended, has gone to extreme lengths to show his bitterness toward labor.

Believe it or not, but he has actually refused to sign cases in the Court of Appeals where unions complain against employers—except in one instance.

But in every case that a company is the complainant against a union in the Court of Appeals, Denham signs the NLRB brief.

For years it has been customary for Government attorneys to sign all briefs before the Court of Appeals, even when they do not personally agree with the case. They sign because they are public officials anxious to get a ruling from the court.

Denham, however, has made it a consistent practice to sign a brief in the Court of Appeals only when the case is against a union. The one exception to this was the Boeing Aircraft case which sought an injunction under the Taft-Hartley Act, whereby he was required to sign.
